"Society Dogs"

Two-reel Century Comedy

Featuring

"BROWNIE," THE WONDER DOG

"BROWNIE" and his master were loafing in the park dreaming of life in society, with "Brownie" wearing a Tuxedo and being waited upon by a corps of obedient servants. Their dreams were cut short, however, by the arrival of a cop, who started them off again on their journey.

"Brownie's" master was a glazier, and, as his advance agent, the dog, would pass along one of the business streets and break several show windows by means of a stone fastened to his tail. Business was fairly brisk, until a cop saw "Brownie" at work.

The dog managed to escape, however, by jumping up on top of a victrola standing outside a music store and posing as the well-known trademark of the dog hearing his master's voice.
