By -- Charles Hutchison.

This episode opens showing the Kellog Mills prspering, but due to the efforts of Marlow, of the Papeer Trust, an option is lost on the last lumber tract available for the manufacture of paper. In the lost formula for making paper from seaweed lies the only hope of salvation for Nancy's mill, and also for Harrison's newspaper syndicate, fighting the paper trust. He offers his yacht to convey Nancy and Bella Brinkley to South America where Bella's father, a fugitive, is the only possessor of the code of the formula.

Ann Haviland, learns of the trip and tells Marlow, who succeeds in a plot to get Nancy and Bella on board his own yacht instead of Harrison's. After they have started Hutch learns how the girls have been duped. He hurries to a bridge under which the yacht must pass, and, from a lowered rope, plans to board the yacht by swinging down to the mast. As the boat approaches, he misses, the first mast, but puts all his efforts in reaching for the second one.
