"Those Dog-Gone Kids"

One-reel Star Comedy

THE Browns have been married ten years with nothing to show for it but a houseful of wifey's canine pets. Brown sees an ad. offering four orphans for adoption. He tries to show it to his wife, but she is too interested in her dogs to pay any attention to children.

She rushes off to get another dog and leaves her husband to take care of her pets. He loses patience and adopts the orphan quartet. He buys complete wardrobes for them and starts to dress and wash them before his wife comes back.

One of the kids climbs up on the roof and falls down the chimney, arriving at the bottom of it loooking like a chimney-sweep. A little colored boy is mistaken for the sooty orphan and given a thorough scrubbing, without avail. The adopted child shows up and is thrown into the tub and scoured.

Mrs. Brown arrives home and is enraged at the invasion. She is finally won over to the little ones and the picture ends.
