"In Again"

Century Comedy

Featuring HARRY SWEET

HARRY loves Dixie Lamont, but her father doesn't think Harry is the man for his daughter. However, Harry elopes with his queen of hearts—but you can't lose rather, and as they step off the train in the big city he faces them. Harry nearly gets caught, and loses his sweetheart trying to elude the policeman.

An escaped convict, needing a change of clothes, chooses Harry's suit for the one he thinks he needs. Harry, unknowingly, walks through the streets with the black and white striped suit on. And a policeman is on his heels, trying to get him.

Harry, in desperate straits, finally gets the suit of a painted—a perfectly white suit, and as he stands in the lumber yard striped shadows from an overhead gate appear on his white suit. The copper sees this, and tries to arrest him. But when they reach the light his suit is again white. And by luck Harry again catches the man who took his suit.

He learns his sweetheart and her father are prisoners in the Blue Cat Cafe, and through a most ingenius method Harry has the officers of the law raid the place. He rescues the girl, and father forgives.
