YNOPSIS

"THE STORM".

AUG 2 1922

David Stewart, blase rounder of the cities, has seen "too much" of women, and is beginning to love the straight clean Northwoods. He saves Burr Winton, a great honest hulk of a woodsman, from robbery and possible injury at the hands of a gang in a trading post where Burr came for supplies. A ~~frnim~~ friendship develops which results in Burr taking Daveid back with him to his valley trapping domain, where for four months snow will hem them in where women never come -- a pleasure for the jaded David. But a few days before the snow Burr is visited unexpectedly by Fachard, a Canuck smuggler, and his daughter. Fachard has been wounded by the Mounted and dies. Snow chains Burr and David with the girl for winter. What comes showsevery human weakness that ultra civilization has developed in David and every primitive good quality that the woods have kept in Burr. They are willing to murder each other from the second day, over Manette Fachard, and she tries to piteously to keep them friendly.

When Spring frees them a forest fire brings a dramatic denouement that marks the girl's choice clear to her.
