With their boat on fire from the explosion of a can of gunpowder, Bob Hagerty and his party consisting of Helen Madson, John Madson her father, and Zeda their Zulu guide, are forced into the waters of a treacherous and crocodile infested jungle river.

Zeda swims to the shore with the wounded Bob and they finally make their way back to the Dead City of Vita. Safely in the home of the "See'er of All" Bob learns from John Madson the details of his unfortunate career and Helen tells her mother how Bob and Zeda repeatedly saved her from the perils of the jungles.

Suddenly the waters of the magic pool are disturbed and, they startled watchers see reflected in the dark waters the vision of "Red Fox" trying to steal through the subterranean "passage of death". Unaware of the safety chambers he falls prey to the wandering lions and thus is John Madson's life long enemy removed from his path. With the mystery cleared up Bob Hagerty and his affianced bride prepare to return to America and live in peace after their terrible experiences amid the miracles of the jungle. The story comes to a close with John Madson and his family reunited and the shadow of his whole life dispelled.
