SYNOPSIS

When lightning strikes a building where two girls, strangers to each other, have sought shelter and kills one of the girls, identities become mixed. Helen Stone is taken for an orphan who was on her way to make her home with a rich aunt whom she had never seen. Helen, bitterly humiliated by her father's disgrace and the knowledge that she has failed at making her own living, accepts the new personality.

She is affectionately received by the supposed aunt, and a young surgeon falls in love with her, but she is recognized as the forger's daughter by an architect, who uses his knowledge to blackmail her and force her to marry him. ~~Helen~~ He is responsible for a shock that paralyzes the aunt. Helen is overcome by the knowledge that her dishonesty has led to such a misfortune, and is further tortured by the realization that the man she loves admires truth above all other virtues. Finally she confesses and wins forgiveness and love.
