* * *

Edna steps out of her "lower" berth, underneath a passenger train, bumps into a cop and has the time of her young tramp life to escape him. She slips through a scant opening in a shed. The cop follows. He comes wedged. She takes his show off and fills it with tacks. Also, she strews tacks on the sidewalk.

A nursemaid believing her to be a boy because of the clothes she wears, flirts with her. Seeing the cop approach, Edna hides in the baby carriage. She bites the cops finger. The cop has his finger bitten again and when Edna realizes her mistake, she beats it.

Hiding in a clump of bushes, she takes her masculine attire off and starts out to get a job as maid which she sees advertised in a newspaper. A large lineup of girls fails to scare her off. She starts a phoney fire and when they discover it to be a fake, they throw her out.

She climbs the firescape. The boss enters and hires her. Then she has the time of her life, caring for the babies which shopping mothers leave in the department store's nursery. She gets two babies mixed but finally restores the right children to their true parents.

The boss makes her head of the department and also makes lover to her.
