"No Clothes To Guide Him"

One-reel Star Comedy

Featuring* MARY PHILBIN

EGBERT, a deaf beat, is A. Pancake's rival for the hand of Mary. As A. Pancake is calling on Mary, Egbert intrudes, but is kicked out by Marys' father. Pancake arranges to elope with Mary. His plans are overheard, however, and the police are notified.

On the morning of the wedding Egbert is beset by a horde of creditors and bill collectors. He manages to elude them, but meets his Waterloo when Go-get-'em Charlie, King of Bill Collecters, takes a hand. Charlie enters Egbert's room and literally cleans up the place, and Egbert, who is left with nothing but his underclothes.

Egbert sneaks out and waylays a policeman whose uniform he appropriates. Two negroes are having a razor duel and Egbert's uniform is neatly sliced off him as he gets within range of the blades. In the meantime Pancake and Mary are about to elope when arrested by the police.

Egbert meets Mary in the police station and presses his suit. She consents to marry him and they leave, arm in arm, after Egbert sees his rival securely behind the bars of a cell.
