"The Cowpuncher's Comeback"

Two-reel Western

Featuring ART ACORD

JACK O'LANE, an adventurous cowpuncher, returns to his own ne town after many years of wandering and is falsely accused of rustling horses, as he is found with some stolen stock which he had accidentally located in the horse thieves' cache. He is imprisoned, returning later to Land's End determined to clear his name.

The proprietor of the Y-Z ranch dies and leaves the outfit to his daughter Betty, but wills its management to Levake and Morgan, apparently reputable ranchers but in reality rustlers indirectly responsible for Jack's imprisonment. Betty returns from the East where she has been at college the same day Jack comes back. oa kikpkhcecMooedfiaoledlotadsc ho e

Jack meets with many rebuffs and insults on account of being a "jailbird." He sees one of the rustlers cheating at cards and exposes him, but his record condemns him and he is laughed at. He goes away vowing to bring back the rustlers whose term he served. Betty gives Jack a job on the Y-Z. She finds the books in a hopeless state. Jack tells her the ranch will never prosper under Levake's management.

The rustlers attack Jack, round up a herd of stock and are racing towards the borde when the cowpunchers and a posse overtake them and, after a spirited gun fight, put them to rout. With the rustlers behind the bars and his name vindicated, Jack O'Lane finds happiness in the heart of Betty.
