"Noiseless Valley"

One-reel STAR COMEDY

AD A. NOYED is a good specimen of the Tired Business Man who seeks quiet and rest in the country. He takes a tent out into the suburbs and starts his vacation by flirting with an attractive girl. Her husband interferes and a fight starts. Hubby gets the worst of it. A little fellow-camper beats up Ad, however. Later Ad tries to rescue the girl's hat from a stream but gets a ducking from Hubby for his pains. In the chase that follows Ad loses his pants.

He arrives at his tent and proceeds to drown his sorrows in hootch. A little burro crawls into his cot and Ad thinks he has D. T.'s when he finds a donkey for a bed companion. During the night he climbs a tree and falls off it through the tent of the girl and her irate husband. After a sound trouncing, he decides to move his tent and takes it down to the bank of the stream.

Goofer Spillbank, a naturalist, has planted some seeds on the spot where Ad pitches his tent. These sprout during the night and cover Ad and his tent with huge pumpkins. When these start to fall on Ad's head he decides he's through with the country and rushes back to his busy office.
