"Should Stepmothers Trifle?"

One-reel STAR COMEDY

CLIFF, a typical "papa's boy," is recalled from college by a telegram announcing his father's second marriage. He arrives home and sees his new step-sister in a shower bath and mistakes her for his step-mother who he immediately brands as a "beach vamp." Sister thinks she'll have some fun with Cliff and keeps up the deception, making his life miserable by forbidding him to smoke in the house and acting "cave-womanish" generally.

Her chum's fiance arrives. As they enter the house he puts his arm around her waist and Cliff, seeing them, immediately thinks the worst. He tells Dad his new wife is unfaithful and Dad goes to investigate. The fiance thinks they're both crazy and runs from Cliff and Dad. He runs into the shower and gives them the slip.

They resume the chase and pursue him to the beach where they proceed to beat him up. The female contingent arrives and saves him from further punishment. Explanations are then made and Cliff takes advantage of his brotherly prerogative by kissing his new sister.
