17320 SINK DEC -6 1921

he comedy tells the story of the chief life-saver and his sistant, the latter being played by Pollard. A series of funny incidents occur before Marie makes her appearance, with "Snub" performing a number of rescues. After saving a child from drowning, Pollard is berated by the parent because he didn't also save the child's hat. The millionaire mayor of the town and his daughter then arrive to see the experiment of the canoe which is shot out of the cannon to save the lives of drowning bathers. The dedication of the invention is one of the greatest days Mudport has known since Doc Hicks got his prescription notice. The mayor promises his daughter in marriage to "Snub" if the invention is a success. All is prepared, and as the experiment is about to be made Marie is discovered floundering around a good distance from shore. The cannon is immediately pressed into service, but fails to work properly. From then on a series of uproarious events occur, bringing the comedy to a surprising finish.
