WINGS OF THE BORDER

By Holman Day

A squatter settlement in the heart of the Timberlands is about to be ousted by a new Company that has been turned over the property. On behalf of the squatters, a young girl, daughter of one of the old timers, seeks the aid of the Governor. Aiding her, is Jean, a son of the Northern woods, whose trip on foot over miles of snow and ice brings him to the Capitol where the Governor is interviewed and offers his aid. And as the time for the proprietary rights were to be assumed by the new Company, relief and assistance is offered by a former friend of Jean who has possession of an aeroplane. Thus, it is on the Wings of the Border plus the able and effective piloting of the plane that brings Jean back to the home settlement in time to protect the squatters and woods-folks.
