Bill Perkins, war veteran bumming his way across the country in an aeroplane without the consent of the pilot, is forced to disembark via parachute when he wants to get off at a fimiliar spot of the map. He lands in the midst of a cow-puncher's argument. He is given a job as a dishwasher and learns that there is a movement afoot to steal the ranch from the absent heir. He allows the men to elevate him to the job of impersonating the missing heir, and then suddenly is disgraced by having them denounce him as an imposter. Whereupon he sets to work and cultivates his family tree extensively, with the ultimate result that everybody gets a grand shock.
