"My Dad"

Tom O'Day lived with his father and mother at a trading post in the Canadian Northwest. His father is under the domination of the factor of the post, a crafty, scheming individual who has the father in his power because of a murder the latter is alleged to have committed. Tom is in love with Dawn, stepdaughter of the Factor, and his clean and ardent love-making is interrupted because of the Factor, too, is in love with his charge. Tom's love for Dawn impels the Factor to threaten to expose the father unless he makes Tom keep away from Dawn and that leads to a thrilling succession of incidents that sweep on to a cyclonic emotional climax and a hand to hand fight between Tom and a thug frontiersman that is reported to be the "greatest fight" ever filmed.
