Fine Story, Strong Cast

Away up in the Canadian Rockies, amid the mighty forces of Nature, a man must be a man even to survive "Kent, the Tracker," a corporal of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, as he was known throughout the land was trailing a fur thief, when he was shot from ambush. After "getting his man" he had just strength to ride to the nearest cabin, where he finds his friend, Jacques Radison, standing over the body of John Barkley, an outlaw fur trader, who had been strangled with a strand of woman's hair. Radison is accused of the crime, which Kent, who believes he has only a few days to live, takes upon himself. Quite unexpectedly Kent recovers, when his enemy, Inspector Kedsty, arrests him for the crime he acknowledged, and locks him up to await the constable from Edmonton.

"THE VALLEY OF SILENT MEN"

The Cast:

Marette Radison, a Canadian girl.....Alma Rubens
[illegible]
Mounted.....Lew Cody
"Buck" O'Connor.....Joseph King
Pierre Radison, the father.....Mario Majeroni
Inspector Kedsty, of the Mounted.....George Nash
Jacques Radison, the brother.....J. W. Johnston

Up from the Valley of Silent Men, so called because of the three white mountain peaks which guard the valley below, comes Marette, quaint French Canadian girl. She learns of Kent's confession and sacrifice for her brother Jacques. At the point of a gun, Marette delivers Kent from jail, secretes him in the home of Kedsty, Inspector of the Post, on the same night that Kedsty is shot by an unknown murderer from a window.

Marette and her sweetheart elude the police who are in hot pursuit, by means of a short cut through the mountains. Their safety lies in getting to Marette's valley. The mountains prove dangerous. Marette falls from a peak and is injured. The journey is continued after a short delay and they reach Marette's cabin in time to hear the confession of the two murders from the lips of old Pierre, Marette's father, who dies in his daughter's arms. Pierre's confession exonerates Kent. The three "Silent Men" radiate a blessing on Marette, who is in Kent's arms.
