CHAPTER ONE -- "THE WAR-PATH"

Leatherstocking was a white man, but ten years living among the Delawares, one of the Mohican tribes, had taught him their language and customs. The Delawares lived in peace with their white brothers. Wah-tawah, a Delaware maid was loved by Chingachgook, a brave, and also by Briarthorn, who stole her away. Chingachgook and Leatherstocking took seperate trails in search of Briarthorn, agreeing to meet at Glimmerglass Lake in seven moons. While searching Leatherstocking met Henry March, a hunter known as "Hurry Harry." They reached Glimmerglass Lake and found wandering Hurons, allies of the French, attacking "Muskrat Castle," the strange home on Glimmerglass Lake of Tom Hutter, ex pirate, and his daughters, Judith and Hetty. Leatherstocking and Hurry Harry helped drive off the Indians, but when they attempted to land, Hurons hidden in trees leaped onto the ark, the craft Hutter used to take him from Muskrat Castle to the shore.
