Story

Rodney Eclair with his mother, his fiancee and her mother are spending their vacation at Avocoda Inn. Rodney, an only son, is spoiled by his fond mama, and in very much danger of becoming a sissy.

One beautiful summer morning Rodney and his fiancee are playing tennis and Rodney happening to look around sees a nice-looking girl at one of the hotel windows, he stares (as after gazing into the physiognomy of his fiancee for so long the girl is a vision) and consequently gets hit with a ball. His fiancee consoles him and the girl laughs. Rodney gets sore and goes back to his mother who pampers him and gives him some knitting to do. The girl comes out at that minute and seeing Rodney knitting laughs again.

One afternoon Rodney gets rough and sits on the beach smoking cigars and reading "Snappy Stories". The girl comes out in a one-piece suit and goes down to bathe. She wades out too far and is in danger of drowning. Rodney disregarding the injunctions of his mother not to get his feet wet, saves her. To satisfy his mother he gets ill and is in bed with a dozen hot water bottles swathed around him and an ice bag at his head.

Meanwhile the girl receives a telegram informing her to go ahead and search her uncle's house for the will and treasure. She goes out and bumps into Rodney whom it seems has at last rebelled. They go off together to search for the treasure.

Apparently they are not the only two with a knowledge of the treasure, as one man is in the cellar working his way into the house and two other men are entering through the windows. As each party makes a noise it scares the other party. They start to search, but cannot find the cause of the noises and attribute it to the uncle's ghost, as the popular impression is that he died in very mysterious circumstances. At last the two men locate Rodney and the girl and decide to frighten them away. They dress up as spooks and parade, but Rodney and the girl mean to stick it out to the end. They have located a safe and are not to be daunted so easily. The man in the cellar has at last worked his way through and is also getting mixed up in this game of hide and seek.

Rodney happening to go into a room which the uncle used as a museum gets twisted with a skeleton and comes out with it on his back throwing a scare into everybody else, but at last the two men catch Rodney and the girl and lock them in one of the bedrooms. They go down to the safe and open it to find the third burglar in it with the supposed treasure in his arms. They immediately scrap but decide to go 50-50 and depart to divide the loot. Rodney tries to shake down the door and locates the real safe in the bedroom wall with all the real treasure secreted therein.

During this time Rodney's party at the hotel are frantically searching for him, thinking he has wandered in his delirium, and they finally come upon the untenanted house. They enter and find Rodney and the girl in each other's arms on the bed. Rodney's party promptly disown him, but Rodney and the girl decide to go by themselves and live happily ever after.
