An unknown tramp overhears a number of smugglers plotting on the U.S. side of the American-Mexican border. The tramp goes to the nearest town and is given a free meal by Margie Daw who runs a restaurant. She tells him he can help her with the dishes in liew of payment.

Black Jim, leader of the smugglers, enters. He makes advances which the girl resents. The tramp whales into the smuggler and after a hard fight, he licks Jim. This places the tramp in the good graces of the cowboys about town.

The next day the smugglers try to hold up the restaurant. They knock out the tramp and wound Margie's father. The citizens enter, seize the tramp and are about to hang him when the girl's father regains consciousness and tells the crowd that Black Jim committed the crime and that he also abducted his daughter.

The tramp captures one of Jim's guards and makes the smuggler lead him to Jim's cave. The tramp wins a bitter fight and turns Jim over to the sheriff's posse. Then the tramp informs thecrowd that he is the new ranger.

Margieis delighted and when she serves him his food over the counter, she accepts his proposal.
