politely declined making a speech. He shook hands readily with the crowd, and said a few words.

The World says the diplomatic memorial, of May 14th, makes public the important fact that President Johnson has instructed the American Minister at London to require of the English government a prompt decision as to the indemnities due to the United States for losses to the Federal citizens by Confederate cruisers, such as the Alabama, and others constructed and equipped in English ports since the beginning of the war. The memorial says that President Johnson only renewed a demand several times made by Mr. Lincoln and denied by England, but he accents it with more vigor than ever.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 2.

Great dissatisfaction prevails among one hundred troops, at the order of the Secretary of War reducing the bounties of such organizations twenty per cent. The excuse that these troops were mustered out before the expiration of the term is regarded as untenable. The State authorities are increasing their exertion to have the order rescinded.

WASHINGTON, June 2.

The State department has rescinded the passport system, except as regards the enemies of the United States.

Govs. Brown and Bovee were to-day separately in conference with the President.

Prentice on Jeff. Davis.

It is stated that, when Jeff. Davis a prisoner, took a newspaper and read President Johnson's offer of a hundred thousand dollars for his arrest, he groaned aloud. Now who can doubt at that moment all the millions of groans that he had caused others to utter came back to him like ghostly echoes of the doleful sounds from his own agonized bosom?

According to the last accounts, Jeff. Davis, when he was captured, was personating his wife's mother on the way to a spring, bucket on arm, to get water. If we had been in Jeff's place, we would, when detected, have set down the bucket and kicked it.

Jeff. Davis, when surprised, couldn't be expected to run very fast. Not only had he petticoats over his legs, but there was a big price, a hundred thousand dollars upon his head.

Jeff. Davis said a year ago, that the Yankee dogs would soon go howling back to their kennels. Little thought he then that he would go with them, howling loudest of all.

When Jeff. Davis began the rebellion he said he would give the Yankees cold steel. It is now suggested that, as his wife's hoops were made of steel, he redeemed the pledge in Georgia.

Napoleon, on account of the devotion of his people to him, was a terror to his enemies even in exile. No such cause exists to make Jeff. Davis formidable.

We don't believe that Jeff. Davis can bring any evidence that he is guiltless of the Washington murder, but, since he turned woman, there's no knowing what he may bring forth.

It takes several weeks for a tadpole to lose his tail and turn to a frog. Jeff. Davis transition period when he dropped his breeches and turned woman was very short.

A disloyal paper says a few words for Jeff. Davis for the alleged reason that he himself has not now the liberty of speech. Thus, when Baalam was unable to speak, his ass spake for him.

Jeff. Davis would be a most audacious man if he could say to the Federal Government:

That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

Jeff. Davis, when he was a man, was much annoyed by the blacks, but, since he turned woman, he has been troubled with the whites.

Jeff. Davis is said to be rather ill. Having turned woman, Jeff. probable expects to be a little unwell every month.

We respectfully submit to the rebels themselves—the male rebels—whether they consider Jeff. Davis under petticoats "a blessing in disguise?"

As Jeff. Davis has turned woman, it would probably be wrong to tax him with any hard work, but we may find him in labor one of these days.

We couldn't have believed that Jeff. Davis would have put on a petticoat to save his life. Alas for the chivalry!

It is said that Jeff. Davis assumed the petticoat in compliment to the women who have shown such an absorbing interest in the success of the rebellion.

We don't know that Jeff. Davis ever confronted a bristling steel, but, when caught, he was girt round about with circling steel.

It is said that Jeff. Davis, if he can get to Europe or Canada, means to set up a millinery and mantua-making establishment.

We suppose that Jeff. Davis may be considered about half man and half woman. It seems to us that the bloomer coustme would best befit him.

Jeff. Davis corresponded with Booth in cypher, and now is himself a cypher.

Jeff. Davis is journeying to Washington. He is in travail very soon after turning woman.

It is probable that the assassins of the President will not, like the boys, enjoy their swing.

OBITUARY.

Died, in Clinton, Tenn., March 9th, of Pneumonia fever, Mrs. Z. LARGE, aged 51 years.

Her sufferings, during the greater part of her sickness, were intense, but she bore them with Christian fortitude. She stated to her husband that she had no fear of death—it appeared to her that she heard the sweet music of heaven, and she would soon join it. To leave her husband and youngest child, a tender daughter, was all that seemed to give her any care. Other than this she had no will of her own. Her funeral was attended on the 10th by neighbors and friends, who seemed to sympathize deeply with the bereaved, and felt

'Tis sweet to gaze upon the sod,
That wraps the moldering clay,
But think her spirit is with God,
Who called it hence away. J. W. S.
