Interview Log

00:00:01 Introduction
00:00:19 Job title Library Outreach Coordinator, employed by St. Stephen’s Human Services, but also contracts with Hennepin County’s Health and Human Services Department and member of their Homeless Access team; is hosted by the library;
00:01:09 How Kate came to this work; had always worked in social services; studied sign language; while at St. Catherine’s University (St. Paul) through Professor D’ann Lesch’s course “The Global Search for Justice” volunteered with St. Stephen’s Street Outreach; was eventually hired as an Outreach Housing Worker;
00:04:06 Discussion of how outreach became part of the library; street outreach workers look for people on the streets, camping out, and connects them to Kate as a housing worker; helped people who’d been long-term homeless adjust to having a home again; worked with landlords; the library had many people asking librarians for resources such as how to get into shelter, how to get county benefits, where to go for a meal; wanted to fill the gap in information, started a Patrons Experiencing Homelessness Work Group; received funding for a full-time outreach worker in the library and hired Kate;
00:07:42 Funding for position is from the Partners Fund, Hennepin County Office to End Homelessness, Minneapolis Downtown Council; Kate has been in this position just over one year;
00:08:13 Description of activities;
  • weekly drop-in hours; announced via library’s P.A. system and messages sent to all public-use computers in the library; one-on-one meetings with people needing help with homelessness; some need shelter, some may be living in a vehicle, some may wish to return to work;
• roams library and engages people; needs may be as basic as obtaining an identification card;
• addresses issues/barriers that the individual identifies, but often there are other issues to address as well;
• models her approach on the library’s approach: offer information and resources, but if the individual just wants to read, don’t force services on them; this is unlike traditional street outreach which is more intent on connecting people with housing;

Clarification about alerts on public computers;

Why people experiencing homelessness are frequent visitors; urban location, five shelters within two miles of library [clarification: correct number is seven: five for adults without children and two for families]; very few public places downtown where someone can be for any length of time; some people come because it’s quiet and safe; others because they can use computers to find housing, employment;

Discussion of other places someone can be in public; drop-in centers, community centers: warm places are listed in cold weather, but they’re often malls, movie theaters requiring money, not able to be carrying bags; skyways are available if you keep moving; Peace House is an option, but most for most people, homelessness is not a dominant way they describe their lives, so they prefer not to spend a lot of time at homeless-specific places; the library is a more “normal”, community location;

Discussion of why people lack housing; systemic problems such as housing inequality; people in poverty and of color more likely to be evicted unfairly, have less access to legal recourse; people with felonies; story of an older lady who shoplifts for food; people living in crises of multiple small barriers; people released from corrections to the community where no one will rent to them; Kate cites Wilder Foundation Homeless Survey about prevalence of traumatic childhood experiences among homeless adults; discussion of mental illness, impact of trauma; lack of homeless prevention support; “survival crimes” such as trading sex for a place to stay;

More details about making contact with people: limited drop-in hours; note that Kate also attends meetings and needs to stay up on resources; she is the only person in her role; referrals by librarians and security about people in need; story about security alerting her to someone in need;

Additional activities: documents case notes and researching resources; in 2016 worked with about 550 individuals; about half are ongoing and the other half she sees once or twice; many social service or healthcare care coordinators visit library to see people but they don’t often connect with one another, so Kate can make those connections; story about a woman Kate was able to locate for other providers;

Discussion of importance of computers for people experiencing homelessness; looking for resources, having email correspondence; connecting on social media;

note about Kate’s office on-site;

Discussion about new HUD-required systems, HMIS (Homeless Management Information System) and Coordinated Entry, and data collection; documentation and evaluation will help us work more systemically; the need to demonstrate importance of our work to others; database used by St. Stephen’s Human Services is ClientTrack; Kate also has access to Hennepin County databases to see things such as criminal history, benefits, some health information; discussion of five single adult shelters and different services provided at small or large shelters; Higher Ground of Catholic Charities, Salvation Army; evaluating people’s need based on vulnerability to prioritize people who need more support; HMIS enables workers like Kate to see if someone has already had certain assessments, is working with someone already and so on; coordinated entry has been used for about six months so far; discussion of systems;

00:41:53 Discussion of challenges; areas where she can’t assist people (such as, rental vacancy at 2% means less incentive for landlords to take Section 8 vouchers; vouchers will expire if not used in 3 months); emotional balance to prevent burnout; concerns about recent political changes; difficulty working with young people; story about a mom and domestic abuse; story about a young man getting in touch with family; boundaries; describes her day as a flood of interactions, complicated situations, and insufficient resources;

00:50:26 Discussion of successes; getting someone an I.D.; story of someone who felt she was on a spiritual journey; getting someone to go to a hospital; getting people back into housing; much of her role is listening without judgment; story of connecting a man to adaptive technology; initially thought she’d do more case management, but her role doesn’t have that capacity;

01:01:55 Other organizations she works with: Healthcare for the Homeless, which now offers mental health services; Front Door, Hennepin County’s phone-in assessment; definition of a “warm hand-off” when one provider engaged with an individual makes a connection with another provider while staying engaged until that relationship is established; Veterans Outreach [with Veterans Administration], Hennepin County’s Homeless Access Unit; StreetWorks [coordinated by Lutheran Social Services] which does youth outreach; Goodwill-Easter Seals works with people on SNAP ENT [Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program - Employment and Training Program] on finding employment; will begin to work/learn new Americans/refugee supports; Twin Cities Rise, Catholic Charities, many others;

01:05:03 Discussion of whether a position like hers had existed in prior generations; housing crisis wasn’t like this in the 1970s; positive developments like understanding post-traumatic stress disorder, stopping mental illness stigma, have changed things; discussion of cultural/economic biases around mental health; discussion of heroin epidemic, opioid prescriptions and abuse;

01:08:14 Discussion of the future of her position; how we define “homelessness”; some communities have ended certain types of homelessness; belief in a tidal change where we fully end homelessness; may take generations to fix entrenched homelessness;

01:11:56 Discussion of her skill set and how they would transfer to other work; expects to always work with people;

01:15:11 Advice for people beginning her sort of work; learn target population, what services you can provide, how involved do you get; define what problems you can help solve because people will bring all kinds of problems; working with broken systems; the temptation to want to do it all; prioritize; take time to evaluate and plan rather than go from crisis to crisis; story about library’s new Americans center and working with colleagues to create effective programs;

01:16:08 Discussion of how her work has changed her; prior work enabled her to see improvements, even slowly; this work is constant person after person; more guilt about her life and access to what she needs; job can be overwhelming; not usually involved long enough to see successes; job successes include decreased tension between homeless patrons and library staff; her involvement in systems change; her change in perspective about “hard-knocks”; the impact of becoming a mother while doing this work;
