

Interviewee: Dick Lehman (DL)
Interviewer: Meredith McGriff (MM)
AFC Collection Number: AFC 2018/030
Interview ID: 5120
Date: November 16, 2018
City/State: Goshen, Indiana
Venue: Dick Lehman Pottery
Language(s): English

Note: Dick and his son were processing venison on the day that I visited. The cold space was ideal for their purposes (in winter, Dick only heats the studio while he is working). However, it was not a good day to take many photos around the studio, since raw meat, bone saws, and the like had taken the place of Dick's usual tools and clay.

Photo Captions/Details

afc2018030_05120_ph01.jpg

This image shows part of Dick Lehman's studio, including his wheel and utility sink. After working for years in a combined studio and retail facility at the Old Bag Factory, Dick designed and built this studio on the same property as his home.

afc2018030_05120_ph02.jpg

A display of cups and tea bowls made by Dick Lehman. He has hung a sign below them that says "...a few of my favorite things..." These items are made in a substantially different style than the wares Dick made in previous years when he was running a production pottery at the Old Bag Factory.

afc2018030_05120_ph03.jpg

Some of Dick Lehman's large wood fired pots on display in front of a window in his studio. These items are made in a substantially different style than the wares Dick made in previous years when he was running a production pottery at the Old Bag Factory.

afc2018030_05120_ph04.jpg

The large sign toward the center of this photo, which features a line drawing of Dick throwing a pot, was once used as a billboard in the early days of his business.

afc2018030_05120_ph05.jpg

The front of one of Dick Lehman's business cards, which shows a line drawing of Dick throwing a pot. This same image was once used on a billboard in the early days of his business; the original sign still hangs in his studio.

afc2018030_05120_ph06.jpg

The back of one of Dick Lehman's business cards, which is written in Japanese. Dick has many friends who are potters in Japan and has travelled there many times. From top to bottom, the card gives the name of his business, his name, his phone number, email, and then website.