Traffic Rules for Airplanes to Lessen Chance of Collision

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Rules agreed on by the British, Belgian and Dutch governments to minimize risk of collision between aircraft, have been issued by the air ministry.

These provide that every pilot when flying on a compass course shall, whenever it is safe and practicable, fly on the right side of the straight line adjoining the point of departure and point of arrival. When an aircraft is flying beneath clouds, it must keep at a fair distance below the cloud base in order to see and be seen.

When a pilot decides to follow a route which is officially recognized or consists of a line of ground marks, he should bear in mind that the risk of collision with another aircraft following the same route is considerable. Every pilot therefore following such a route shall endeavor to keep it at least 300 meters on his left.

Every pilot who decided to cross any route he is following shall do so at right angles and as high as circumstances permit.

PRINCESS ALICE IN FROM SOUTH; MANY PASSENGERS

The Princess Alice, Capt. S. H. Ormiston, arrived in port last night about 6:30 o'clock during a driving rain and several hours ahead of her scheduled arrival.

The Alice had 120 passengers on board and 108 tons of freight most of which is for Skagway.

Because of the rainstorm the majority of the passengers remained on board ship, instead of making the trip to the glacier or sightseeing in the city.

The Princess Alice brought six passengers for this port: Samuel Feldon, W. H. Woodrow, Mary K. Jones, Sister Mary Ethel, Sister Mary Abigail and Sister Mary Luminia.

The Alice sailed for Skagway at 11 o'clock last night and is scheduled to return here Friday morning, sailing southbound at 4 o'clock in order to make a stop at Taku Glacier.
