Entered as second class matter at the postoffice, Seward, Alaska.

THE GREATEST opportunity ever offered to a community of the size is now presented to the people of Seward.

Within a few months the route of the government railroad will probably come up for decision.

Other people and other communities are moving heaven and earth to influence the minds of the president and his advisors.

A month of activity and intelligent labor now might be worth a whole lifetime of constant drudgery.

Seward is the logical and the best favored terminal for the great road and what is Seward doing to keep the fact before the minds of the administration and the people of the country?

Is Seward going to continue to live in a fool's paradise while others are laboring ceaselessly to undermine it?

From other quarters are sent out the stories that a road from another place would be shorter by some seventy miles than a road from Seward.

What is Seward doing to show that one of the richest districts of Alaska is that which the enemies of Seward would have eliminated from the country served by the government railroad?

What is Seward doing to show that the proposed alternative route is practically impossible and a route which would pass through barren territory?

What is Seward doing to prove that its harbor is unquestionably perfect—yes, absolutely perfect—while other harbors are not only imperfect but practically impossible during parts of the year?

No doubt we are all certain that the Seward route must and will be selected as we and all people are always certain that truth and right must prevail and be established.

But—and let the people remember the fact—truth and right have often fallen before the veiled onslaughts of falsity and wrong, and worth has by no means always been able to secure its price.

Seward is the right terminal, the just terminal and the worthy terminal for the government railroad and every man who knows Seward and the country around it knows this to be a fact, but because it has worth and right and justice on its side is the very reason why its claims should be kept before the minds of those who have the decision of the matter in their hands and who will be only too glad to have reliable data placed in their possession.

To supply this data and to take the proper steps towards keeping the advantages of Seward before the eyes of the administration and congress should be not only the constant aim of every citizen but of all the citizens as a unit.

The people of Seward should be united as one man, at least for this purpose, and they should not only be united but their efforts should be organized and concentrated on this one predominant task.

Now is the time to organize.

Now is the time to get to work.
