Kodiak is receiving a great deal of comment and publicity on account of the Naval Base activity at Womens Bay. We appreciate this of course, but at the same time let us not forget that Kodiak offers many more interesting things for the benefit of the people which existed long before defense plans necessitated a naval base here.

Hunting and fishing has long been the general idea connected with the first thought of Kodiak and we presume still is, but many people, including ourselves, did not know that such beauty existed as here. Our little community itself yields a very picturesque panorama when approached by ship. The entrance into the port itself is undoubtedly one of the smallest in the world and the many islands dotting the surrounding country add to the beauty of Kodiak's setting.

We should urge our Chamber of Commerce to stress the value of Kodiak's scenery more than has been done in the past because we feel sure that no other city or locale in Alaska offers the tourist more in comparison. Let's all get together and boost Kodiak for what it is, one of the oldest and prettiest spots in the whole of the vast territory of Alaska.

CHICKALOON HIGHWAY POSSIBLE

Whole-hearted support from Governor Gruening and Delegate Dimond has been accorded the move of the Anchorage Chamber of Commerce to construct a highway (see page 13.)
