A MAN by the name of Jas. Ritter died in Fayetteville, Ark., on the 2nd inst., who, while alive, tipped the beam at the 470 pound notch.

A RE-UNION of the confederate soldiers of Tennessee, and the unveiling of a confederate monument, took place at Jackson on the 2nd inst.

A CONVENTION of the Travelers Protective Association, met at Little Rock on the 1st inst. To each of the badges worn by the members was attached a rabbit's foot.

The agony as to who shall sit on the new land Court bench will be over in a few days, probably this week. The Attorney-General is reported to have said that one of the judges will be a democrat.

The new party has for its war cry "equal rights to all and special privileges to none." If that is not the very principle for which the Democratic party has always fought we would like some one better informed than ourselves to tell us what is.

Mr. Harrison does not approve of Secretary Foster's scheme of extending the 4 1/2 per cent bonds which mature next September, but the Secretary still hopes to talk him around, as he knows the necessity of having the money for other uses will soon be so apparent that everyone can see it.

The pension office is giving the administration a good deal of trouble. According to good republican authority Mr. Harrison utilized his visit to Philadelphia on memorial day by trying to get a big G. A. R. man to take Commissioner Raum's place; but he didn't succeed. The Pennsylvania man was too smart. He wasn't looking for that sort of an office.

This is a story with a moral that the Mobile Register prints: "The man who thinks that the subterranean idiosyncrasy of the feeble minded advocates of that gossamer delusion, will prevail in this or any other Southern State, and therefore that is prudent to hedge will find himself in the condition of the rural Mississippiian who for the first time stood on deck of a Yazoo steambat. When the gong sounded for dinner he rushed to the rail preparatory to leap. A bystander, seeing his indecision shouted "Jump!" Over went the young man into the raging waters. When he reached shore and came to himself he shook his fist at the steambat and remarked: "I am all the way from Polocot Bayou, and I never seed a steambat before, but goldarn my hide if I can't lick the feller that said 'jump!'"

It does not seem to be clear to our friends of the third party that the sub-treasury plan can be of no advantage to a very large portion of the American people—the great army of laborers and artisans who have no lands or crops to pledge to the government for advances of cash.—Arkansas Democrat.

As before remarked in the Times the class of people who are loudest in their demands for the sub-treasury scheme, are the very chaps who wouldn't get a smell even if a sub-treasury should be established in their back yards. Besides it is un-American in principle, and but another step toward centralization.
