

Political Announcements

We are authorized to announce
JUDGE JAMES GOULD
of Jefferson County, a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary.

Little too much rain.

Do not overlook the fact that in this world one must deal with the lower realities as well as with the higher ideals.

The reason man got into the habit of thinking he had brains is because he could see that he didn't have beauty.

If you think laughing is what makes a man let you will change your mind after you see him eat.

About the easiest thing in the world for a preacher to do is to say something that somebody doesn't endorse.

The average housewife works for less pay than the average servant girl, if by pay is meant cash. Usually the housewife who receives three or four dollars a week has more spending money than her mistress. Of course the latter has better credit, ordinarily; but to use the credit means, as the housewife well knows, bills at the end of the month and grumblings from the head of the house. The result is that after ten years of domesticity resignation is bred to things as they are. And the way they are is rarely the way the woman imagined they would be in the heyday of her bridehood. Alas, this world is but a vale of tears—and most of the people are longing for things they can't have. Come to Arkansas.

The waterworks and sewerage franchise proposition now before the city council looks mighty good—too good to be passed up without serious consideration.

The truck grower must be something of a business man in order to succeed in marketing his products to the best advantage. There is plenty of money in the truck industry, but the planter should know more than the mere rudiments of sowing and harvesting his crops. In these days of modern progress it is necessary for the truck grower, like all others who are endeavoring to make a living and acquire a competency, to read and study the journals that are published in the interest of his particular calling, and to be able to judge of the many conditions that may contribute to the success or failure of the farm and garden.

It's about time some of our papers were forgetting the past and looking more to the present. The old citizen is pleased, of course, to see something about the "good old days," but what pleases the business man most is to see something about the present advancement and development of the town.

Listen! An Indiana editor began his business career 25 years ago and is now rated at $100,000. This vast accumulation of wealth was made possible by his frugality strict attention to business, hard and incessant work, and from the fact that a rich uncle died, leaving him nine hundred and ninety nine thousand nine hundred and ninety eight dollars.—E.S.

There is good money in raising hogs, and the feed can be produced at the minimum of cost—in Hot Spring County.

STATE FAIR GROUNDS FINEST IN SOUTH

MAGNIFICENT PLANT WHICH
COST HALF A MILLION DOLLARS,
EQUIPPED IN MODERN STYLE.

EVERY CONVENIENCE AND COMFORT FOR THE VISITORS

Great Exposition Palaces, Electric
Lights, Water Works, Sewer System,
Telephone and Telegraph Connections, and Connected With City
by Double Track Trolley Lines.

Except to those who have visited the Arkansas State Fair heretofore, it is not generally known that we have the finest and best equipped fair grounds in the South. The great plant embraces nearly one hundred acres, and with all improvements cost half a million dollars. It is the property of the Oaklawn Jockey Club, was built for a racing track and is said to be the finest in the United States. Since the legislature confiscated this property by the passage of the Amis act, which killed horse racing in this state, the owners have given the use of this splendid plant to the people of the state, free of cost, for the use of the State Fair. This they have done for five years, notwithstanding the fact that they have received no legislative relief in return. The fair grounds are one mile south of the city of Hot Springs, and are reached by a double-track trolley electric car line. The cars run into the grounds, discharging and taking on passengers under roof, so that rain or shine, one is not subject to discomfort. During the fair, cars run on a three minute schedule, and the crowds are swiftly and safely handled without delays, and the run to the city takes but seven minutes.

The great exposition palace is 200 by 400 feet, two stories, with concrete floor, toilets, water fountains, restaurants and everything for the comfort of the public. The great grand stand on the second floor, facing the mile track, will seat three thousand people. Agricultural palace is almost as large, stands near the main palace, and is connected by covered passage ways on both stories. South of these are Electric Grove, where the main amusement features are located, a beautifully shaded lawn, glowing at night with thousands of incandescent lights. The grounds are beautifully ornamented with shrubbery and flowers along the gravel walks, with flowing fountains here and there. The machinery, live stock and poultry departments comprise a large area. A large poultry house contains pens for thousands of fowls; while there are comfortable stalls for several thousand head of horses, cattle and swine. The entire plant is equipped with waterworks and sewer systems, electric lights, telephone and telegraph lines, so that communication can be had by wire or long distance phone whenever desired right from the grounds. Better facilities for a great fair could hardly be designed. No matter what the character of exhibit, whether of animal or other thing, it can be safely provided for, and shown under the most favorable conditions. The fair is operated under a perfect system, so that the safety of exhibits while there, and their prompt and safe return is assured. If you have never before visited the Arkansas State Fair, don't miss it this fall, and at the same time, have an opportunity to see the world-famous health and pleasure resort, Hot Springs, one of the seven wonders of the world.

TAKE YOUR BOY TO THE FAIR.

Take that boy of yours to the State Fair this year. Take that bright, intelligent daughter, too. A great State Fair is an educational institution of more than ordinary importance. It is such, not only to the young, but to the old as well. Knowledge is more quickly obtained and more firmly grasped by observation than any other method. This fact is recognized and utilized in all our educational systems today. At the State Fair this fall, you may see the latest discoveries in arts and science, in machinery and implements for all lines of industry, the highest grades of live stock, the best breeds of fowls, and the highest achievements in human skill and ingenuity. It is a great school, and aside from the entertainment and pleasure of the trip, will be worth to you double the expense.

AN OBJECTIONABLE RULE NOW ABOLISHED.

A rule was in force at the State Fair last year, stipulating that in case any exhibit had no competition, second money only should be awarded. A similar rule is in force at other state fairs. The management of the Arkansas State Fair this year abolished that rule, believing it to be unjust to the exhibitor, and it will not be in force this fall. The management take the view that any one bringing an animal or article to the fair for exhibition, does so expecting competition, and willing to take chances in meeting it. If there is no competition he is not responsible for this, and should take first prize.

J. H. REEVES & CO.

CLOTHIERS, HATTERS, FURNISHERS

In Memory of H. A. Yates.

Whereas, it has pleased the good Father above to call from our midst in the walks of men, to his reward beyond, eternal in the heavens, our co-laborer and brother, H. A. Yates.

And whereas, we recognize that the Great Noble Grand of the universe of all men doeth all things well, we bow in humble submission to His will.

Therefore, he it resolved: That while we mingle our tears and sympathize with the loved ones left behind, we feel that our loss is his gain.

Resolved: That we, in memory of our departed brother, wear the usual badge for thirty days and our obligation stand as a beacon light to remind us of our duty to those left behind.

Respectfully submitted,

Richard Worley,
J. Elmo Young,
J. F. Williams,
Committee

HIGH AUTHORITY.

The parents of little Angela belong to a "new thought" cult which lays great stress on the importance of obeying the secret mandates of the "higher self." One day when Angela had transgressed in a most unusual and trying manner, her mother impatiently inquired:

"Who gave you permission to do this? What in the world made you think of acting in such a manner?" "My higher self, mamma," glibly replied the anxious Angela. "And we know," with unintentionally comic representation of her mother's best platform manner, "there can be no authority higher than that."

TOTALLY DEPRAVED.

"Prisoner at the bar, the offense with which you stand charged," said the judge in an awfully impressive tone, "has been fully proved, and it now becomes my duty to pass upon you the sentence of the law. You cannot be otherwise than deeply affected by the ignominy which you have incurred through the indulgence of your vicious propensities. A bountiful creator endowed you with a powerful frame, a comely appearance and more than ordinary intelligence; and through the care of your respectable parents you received at the outset of life an excellent education—instead of which, prisoner at the bar, you have persisted in going about the country and stealing ducks."—Jefferson, "A Book About Lawyers."
