

THINK of the young men—the boys in blue and in gray—who went down in the cruel slaughter of Cold Harbor and in the gloom of the Wilderness, and who wore themselves out in hospital and in prison! You can take up no college history, or town history or family history, without coming across evidences of the unspeakable sadness of this young life. The boys who there surrendered it, in the full flood of patriotism, would otherwise have seen the telephone and the automobile and the flying machine, and the countless wonders of our great era, and would have been able to witness the solemn drama of the nations as it has been enacting. All this is life. Some of them would have fallen away from natural causes, to be sure, but many would now be looking complacently out toward the setting sun. Children and grandchildren—who have now never crossed the threshold of existence—would have been gathering about them in affectionate reverence. What infinite paths in the toll of war!
