

Crossett Shoes For Style, Fit and Wear

The fit and wear of a shoe are more closely associated than most people realize. The best leather in the world would give very unsatisfactory wear if made up on a poorly shaped last. A shoe expert has stated the problem thus:

"To place the room in the last where there is the least pressure, giving maximum wear by preventing the overstraining of the leather at any point."

It is easier said than done. But many years of successful experience has taught the Crossett designers how to cut a shoe that will afford a maximum of style, comfort and durability.

When you select your shoes from the large Hanny stocks, complete in all styles, leathers and sizes, you may depend upon getting a shoe that feels well, looks swell and wears well.

SENSATIONAL DASH FOR FUGITIVE ENDED LAST NIGHT IN YAVAPAI CO.

After an exciting chase and a record-breaking auto run, Sheriff Adams and Deputy Jim Murphy yesterday caught up with D. A. Salazar, wanted here for forgetting to bring back a horse and buggy he had rented from Charles Kurley of the Monroe stables.

The officers received the complaint that Salazar had failed to return the rig, and, making inquiries, learned that the outfit had been seen going north. They were soon on the main trail and followed him to a town named Cobes in Yavapai county. The officers had intended to pass the night in that place and take up the chase in the morning, but the rate they had traveled enabled them to overtake the fugitive.

Salazar is well known here in police circles, having at one time sold a bunch of sheep not belonging to him, for which he served time in the penitentiary. He is also alleged to have been in the toils at one time for raising a check.

In his trip northward Salazar was taking his time, selling suits of clothes, collecting a deposit on them, and then failing to send the clothes. He was accompanied by a woman, whose name could not be learned.

The officers took him to Prescott, where he was held in the Yavapai county jail last night and will be brought to this city today.

DEATH CLAIMS

tor once asked him for a letter to Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Aldrich replied: "As I have met Mr. Rockefeller only twice in my life I fear the letter would be of but little if any assistance to you."

In legislation he was charged with being sectional. This is hardly borne out by the facts, and more than once he gained his points by utilizing the conflict of interests between West and South and East.

Having begun his career as a business man, Senator Aldrich continued throughout his public service to display business-like methods and extraordinary capacity for organization.

Upon his election to the senate, he was immediately made chairman of the Committee on Rules, and a member of the Committee on Finance and Inter-state Commerce. Later as chairman of the Finance Committee he was called upon to assume a large share of the responsibility for all tariff and financial legislation before the senate.

He participated in the preparation of no fewer than six revisions of the tariff and bore the burden of labor incident to them. The Payne-Aldrich tariff act was engineered through the senate by him after many weeks of skillful maneuvering and hard fighting.

Mr. Aldrich was always ready to seize upon any trend of public business to advance legislative causes in which he was interested. The "banker's panic" of 1907 enabled him to give impetus to his plan to bring about monetary reforms. The first fruit of his labors in this direction was the Vreeland-Aldrich Emergency Currency law of 1908, put through the senate by Aldrich after an elaborate filibuster directed by Mr. La Follette, the Progressive Republican from Wisconsin, who was aided by Mr. Stone of Missouri, a democrat. Sharp parliamentary tactics enabled Mr. Aldrich to bring the bill to a final vote, but in taking Mr. La Follette off his feet Mr. Aldrich made an enemy who was relentless in his opposition during many subsequent legislative contests.

The emergency currency law was regarded by Mr. Aldrich as the best remedy possible of speedy enactment, but he did not stop there. He began work immediately upon a more permanent plan of currency reform, giving most of his time to the work of the national Monetary Commission. He was able to devote his time unreservedly to his work because in 1911 he declined to be a candidate for re-election, giving ill-health as a reason.

After his retirement from public life Mr. Aldrich spent much of his time in travel but he continued to follow business affairs. He saw many of his ideas on the subject of currency enacted by the democrats and although the new law did not bear his name it is known to a large extent he approved of what was done.

Tom Corbett was 37 years old and the youngest son of a family of five boys and three girls. James Corbett, the former champion, now in Australia, Joseph, Frank and three married sisters remain alive. A widow and two children also survive.

When James fought his world's championship battles his younger brother Tom was always with him as a traveling companion and second.

England "UP AGAINST THE REAL THING."

The Real Thing presents itself, primarily, as a threat and a challenge directed against the very foundations of our national and individual existence.

If you would conceive the state of our national psychology, you must imagine how you yourself would feel and think if everything you had taken for granted and reckoned as secure—your country, your home, your family, your country, your life, your ideals—were suddenly menaced and bidden to defend themselves from destruction.

A frontier settlement in the old days which had just received intelligence that a powerful tribe of Red Indians was on the war-path in the immediate vicinity, a populous city feeling the tremors of an earthquake which had already shattered its next neighbor—these are images which may help the reader to understand the psychological distribution of England at the present hour. I do not mean that there is panic; for there is none. England is calm, resolute, and prepared. Her teeth are set, and she has braced herself to meet a tremendous shock.

And the need so to brace herself has acted as a stimulus to every faculty of her soul. We are feeling more deeply, thinking more deeply, thinking more clearly, willing more vigorously than we do in normal times. There is exaltation in the national mind. One can even find a truth in the strange remark recently made by Mr. Harold Begbie, that England was never happier than she is to-day. But behind it all there is the sense of a present threat.—T. P. JACKS, in the April Yale Review.

Heinie Wagner.

According to reports from Boston, Heinie Wagner's arm has failed to regain the cunning that helped win that 1912 championship, though it shows some improvement over last season, when it practically was useless.

Heinie probably will start the season on the bench as a utility man. But even if he doesn't round into form he's likely to be kept as a sort of assistant manager to Bill Carrigan. He and Bill were the advisory board whose brains doped out much of the strategy that won that pennant three years ago.

BOB FITZSIMMONS CONGRATULATES JESS

Bob Fitzsimmons (right) congratulating Jess Willard over latter's victory. Champion Jess Willard stopped off the train in Washington en route from Havana to New York, and was met by Bob Fitzsimmons, former champion, who warmly congratulated him. Fitzsimmons says with four or five months' training he could lick Jess in four rounds. Fitzsimmons hasn't a very high opinion of the Kansas cowboy, and predicted before the Havana fight that Jack Johnson would win.

TOM CORBETT DEAD

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16.—Thomas Corbett, brother of James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, died at his home here after an illness of two days. He suffered a severe attack of pleurisy.

Thomas Corbett was 37 years old and the youngest son of a family of five boys and three girls. James Corbett, the former champion, now in Australia, Joseph, Frank and three married sisters remain alive. A widow and two children also survive.

When James fought his world's championship battles his younger brother Tom was always with him as a traveling companion and second.

For the last eight years Tom Corbett was the biggest betting commissioner on the Pacific coast. In the last presidential campaign he handled $150,000 for his clients. For five years previous to that he was associated with his brother, Harry Corbett, in the pool room business.

GIRL HELD AT COUNTY HOME IS TAKEN AWAY FORCIBLY BY MOTHER

Mother Who Evidently Did Not Know Daughter Had No Right to Leave Jurisdiction of Court Leaves County Taking Girl With Her. Officer Goes After Her.

Judge Stanford of the superior court yesterday issued a bench warrant ordering the return of Mildred Kuhles, aged 14, who has been held in the detention home for some time, but whose mother yesterday met her on the street and took her out of the county.

The girl's mother, who is a socialistic lecturer, brought her to this city some time ago, but left her later practically destitute. She was taken in charge by the county authorities and turned over to the detention home from which place she was located in a good home here. The family with whom she was living, were sending her to business school, and she had almost completed her course.

The mother has written several times from the east asking the superior court to let her have the custody of the child. At one time she sent half of the money necessary to carry the girl back east but never sent a large enough amount.

Evidently thinking that she had the right to take her daughter with her when ever she wished, Mrs. Kuhles, it is claimed, met the girl on the street and took her to Tucson, where on the advice of authorities here the two were apprehended. The mother was not arrested, and was reported to be making a speech on the plaza in that place last night.

Probation Officer W. J. Osborne left last night for the Pima city and will bring the young girl back with him. She is under the charge of the court, and can not leave the county without permission.

MOOSE WORKING FOR SANATORIUM HERE

Moose will make a special effort to get publicity for their wants in the matter of the sanitarium, and in order to secure the best co-operative effort of the valley, they have enlisted the aid of the chamber of commerce.

A Moose committee composed of Dr. Boido, R. E. Marks, Wiley Jones, Walter Hoyt, Walter Van Tyne, P. C. Adams called on the directors of the chamber of commerce yesterday afternoon and succeeded in being very convincing on the subject of the sanitarium. They described the work that has been done to interest the national committee in the matter, and pointed out what preparations had been made to place the institution should it be established in Salt River Valley.

A special committee of five was named by the president to work in connection with the movement. C. A. Stauffer, E. P. Conway, H. R. Tittle, J. L. Gust and C. A. Donofrio.

Villa Bi-Plane Flies BROWNSVILLE, April 16.—A Villa bi-plane was flown before Matamoras today by Farnum Fish of Los Angeles, an American. He attempted no military maneuvers and broke his landing gear when he came down.

Saloons were reopened in Matamoras today. There was no drunkenness, however, as beer, the only drink sold, costs $5 per bottle Mexican money. The soldier pay is $2 daily Mexican money.

Women of the Juchitecos Indians, forming part of the Matamoras garrison, have been a factor in the garrison's recent fighting. They have crouched for concealment in the water of the numerous shallow lakes which cover the fighting area.

IF YOU CARED

'Tis dawn in the sky of the world, 'Tis dawn in the sky of my heart, And earth is the bud of a rose. Whose petals are trembling apart; So I come to your door in the dawn, And I breathe you my life in a word. You would smile, you would lean from your window, my queen, If you heard—if you heard.

The air is all throbbing with life, And I am a pulse of the flame. All breathless the universe waits— Like a heart that is tuned to your name. As the stars in their courses last night Kept time to each breath that you drew. But our passion is dumb—O my love you would come. If you knew—if you knew.

You would glow in the flush of the dawn You glitter so coldly above; You would lean like a rose to his cry Who yearns to the lips of your love. You would raise him who faints at your feet, To a height that his hope never dared;

You would warm the poor clod in your arms to a rod, If you cared—if you cared.

HELPS HUSBAND WIN CHICAGO MAYORALTY

Mrs. William Hale Thompson.

Mrs. William Hale Thompson, wife of the newly elected mayor of Chicago, helped her husband very materially in the campaign that has just closed. She made speeches in his behalf and helped organize women's Thompson clubs. The effectiveness of her campaigning is attested by the fact that about two-thirds of the women voters of Chicago cast their ballots for her husband.
