EFFEMINATE METHOD

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson were having a discussion one evening over Mr. Morris, a friend of the family. "I don't see," said Mrs. Hudson, "how you can say that Mr. Morris has an effeminate way of talking. He has a very loud and masculine voice." "I mean by an effeminate way of talking, my dear," responded the husband, "that he talks all the time." National Monthly.

Milady

Every hostess longs for a social secretary that the entire responsibility of entertaining might not rest upon her shoulders. If she is clever, she knows that it is essential not only to have every detail correct, but that an artistic and distinctive scheme must be carried out.

It is often quite a problem to shop, and when one is not constantly in touch with new fads and fancies they are sometimes at a loss when a selection is to be made.

We will be delighted to assist you—to be, in fact, your social secretary.

You might search the most exclusive shops in the country and you would find nothing more attractive than our stock of guest and table cards and favors. If you wish to carry out a color combination or an unusual idea, the conceits will be especially designed for the occasion.

A clever hostess attracts interesting people to her social functions. She should not forget that place and tally cards add a finishing touch to crown the whole with success.

Then, too, there is the dinner favor. Here real ingenuity is required for the novelty should be unique and beautiful and likewise serve as a delightful and practical souvenir.
