Frank Selmer, owning his own machine and entering purely for the sport of the thing is counted on as one of the sure finishers.

OFFICERS CATCH SLIPPERY GANG

Last of Outfit Who Have Robbed Numerous Houses and Stores Routed Up Yesterday by Sheriff Adams and Deputies

With the arrest of R. E. Brooks in Hayden, the sheriff's office succeeded in rounding up the last of a gang, who are thought to have burglarized more stores and houses than has been the luck of any similar organization in this time.

The gang, whose official head and brains was James Wilson, and whose membership in addition to Brooks, was Clarence Butler, a negro and Ed Lepka, had for some time, been rambling around the valley, and helping themselves to whatever came hands.

Yesterday Wilson accompanied Sheriff Adams around the valley and pointed out places which they had entered and robbed. They stole a dressed hog in Tempe, entered Teeters store at the same place and secured a Winchester rifle.

Wilson and Butler were partners in another escapade some time ago, which landed them behind the bars for 60 days. They are employed by a local railroad company, in cleaning off brick taken from a building being torn down.
