Negro Soldier Mural To Be Unveiled At Mt. View

Stage Of Field House Is Set For Tonight's Big
Louis Armstrong Show

The stage is all set at the Field House for tonight's biggest entertainment feature of the year for Fort Huachuca's GIs—the nationally-popular Coca-Cola Bottling company's "Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands," with Louis Armstrong, king of the hot trumpet and master of the high C note riding the bandwagon's driver's seat.

NBC radio technicians arrived on the Post Wednesday to complete the stringing of wires—which will permit the show to be aired over the Blue network to the nation, and by shortwave to soldiers on furloughs all over the world.

The "Spotlight Band" show will begin at 6:30 p.m. and will consist, according to an announcement of Paul Wallace of the Coca-Cola Bottling company of Douglas, sponsor of the municipal event.

"During the show there will be a two-minute period of musical broadcast over 137 Blue network stations described as 'Fort Huachuca and its activities.'

Louis Armstrong, "the Trumpet King of Jazz," is master of the musical event, and has made his "I'm Confessin' That I Love You" (long-playing 12-inch record on Me) with popular music fans all over the world. Coca-Cola's GIs who have long admired his waxings of that immortal 12-inch C note will hear it first hand in his famous version of the "St. Louis Blues"—maybe—as well as some of those same songs which he is about to find the American trumpet.

Preliminary reports indicate a dance will be held in the Field House.

The Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands is sponsored continually by the Coca-Cola Bottling company, Douglas, to be heard weekly nights a week from Naval Air Station, Marine Corps Main Gate, Marine Merchant Marine bases and from war zones throughout the nation.

The appearance of being Louis Armstrong's famous musical attraction in church is due to the courtesy of the General Motors company and its executives as representative and to the efforts of Lt. Col. C. E. Nelson, Special Service Officer, who on a recent trip dealtnumbers numerous band organizations and musical booking agencies specifically to the city and better entertainment bands and shows for Fort Huachuca. The appearance of Louis Armstrong's band here will mark the beginning of a series of important musical units visiting the Post.

Industry To Aid Veterans
Of W. W. II

DETROIT, Mich. (ALNS)—American industry is preparing itself to make sure that disabled veterans of World War II will not be forced to sell pencils, apples or papers on the street corners to make a living if they prefer other employments.

Several meetings were held here by two members of the National Field Force of The American Legion. These men—Col. C. McGourty, who has no hands, and Walter A. Ansonwood, who has no feet, both as the result of war wounds—demonstrated their ability to perform all normal tasks that are expected of a man who are 'men in body. They asked industry to give (Continued on Page Eight)

To Dedicate
Work of Art
Here Sunday

A historic mural depicting phases of the role by the Negro soldier in all of the wars of the world which the United States has engaged from the Revolution to World War I. It will be unveiled and dedicated during an impressive ceremony to be held at 10:45 a.m. Sunday, August 21, in the Officers' Memorial View Mess.

The mural, 80 by 20 feet, which will hang permanently in the Memorial Hall of the Officers' Memorial Mess, is a work of art by the noted Negro artist in scenes from the Revolution to World War I. It was painted by T. A. Lewis, professor of art at Howard University. His work has been exhibited in art galleries throughout the nation and who also painted a panoramic mural for the U. S. Department of Commerce for the Officers' Lakeview Mess.

Presenting the base-long program which will mark the mural unveiling are representatives of the "Legends of Our Wars," by the Post Color Guard, and members of the Officers Temporary Service Division.

For the entertainment portion of the program, the USO will be present at the Lenox House Open Air Theatre for Fort Huachua's GIs in the first of a novel exchange series of shows.

Fort Huachua's Special and Mobile
Services Section personnel will present the play on the following Tuesday when they take a variety show to Thursday's Mountain Field audience.

The August 20th show from Davis-Monthan Field will feature the singing of baritone Rose Ann Stevens. USO entertainers who formerly were vocalists on the Colored Navy's and Alhambra's bands. Miss Stevens, who recently returned from a year's service in Japan, toured to Greenland, England, North Africa and other war zone areas, knowing what soldiers like and can really "drive the goods" in.

Other features of the Davis-Monthan show will be the fine Air Force band, led by Sgt. Nobles; the first Negro band to be used on overseas bases; a Battery of GIs will be used in the show.

To conclude the entertainment, the Murals will be unveiled and dedicated by Maj. Gen. David Eisenhower, at 10:45 a.m. Sunday, August 21.
