COUNTY SEAT REMOVAL NEW LAW DESIRED.

We regret to see that Capt. Kelton who has come on to Phoenix to resume his seat in the legislature as a member from this county, has for the second time declared his opposition to any change in the law now on the statute books providing for the removal of a county seat in the state of Arizona. Captain Kelton may not consistently assume such a position of support of the present county seat removal.

Captain Kelton was elected to the legislature on a platform which strongly upheld the "right of the people to rule" in all matters affecting their interests and welfare.

The present county seat removal law denies to the citizens of Cochise county the right to remove their seat of government from Tombstone to a point where the bulk of the population would be better accommodated and where a great saving of expense to the county and to those having business with the public offices would be effected.

The present law provides that before a county seat removal election can be held a petition must be presented to the board of supervisors, bearing the signatures of one-fourth of the qualified electors of the county and representing ONE-THIRD of the assessed taxable value of the county. Under this law the courts have decided that corporations not being qualified voters cannot sign such a petition, even for the purpose of representing their property. More than two thirds of the taxable property in this county is owned by mining companies, railroad companies, cattle companies, mercantile companies, all incorporated and thus barred from representation on county seat removal petition.

This law which deprives the citizens of Cochise county of the privilege of changing the location of their county seat should not be permitted to remain on the statutes. It has blocked the desire and effort of the people of this county to move their county seat to a place where three-fourths of the population could more conveniently reach it and where many thousands of dollars would be saved every year to the county and its citizens in the transaction of the public business. It is the expectation that the coming session of the legislature will be authorized to consider a change in this impossible law and no one may rightfully oppose a county seat removal law that will permit the citizens of any county moving their county seat when they desire to do so.

NO ROOM FOR DYNAMITERS.

The dynamite conspiracy case has been discussed and commented on from every imaginable angle by the press, the unanimity of expression being that violence has no place in our system of government to redress wrongs, imaginary or real. The Saturday Evening Post gives the following firm but just expression of its views on the subject:

"The American Federation of Labor in its thirty-second annual convention at Rochester, N. Y., very properly denounced the methods of the dynamiting unionists on trial at Indianapolis. The denunciation would have been more commendable had it not been apologetic in form. The federation should have washed its hands clean of all dynamiters and their methods. In their report, the executive council says, 'The McNamaras were either criminally insane or insanely criminal—either condition due to imperfect education, incomplete education or defective mentality. In any case, society is responsible for not remedying the condition.'"

"In the last analysis, society is responsible for all forms of injustice, political, social, industrial. While conditions in the industrial world are not yet ideal, they are not of the sort to produce dynamiters, absolutely devoid of regard for property or life. A more lurid tale than that unfolded in the confessions at Indianapolis could not be conceived. Those who originated the plots and the tools who put them into execution seem to have lost all sense of moral perspective. They set explosives to destroy life and property, even as an honest man going to his daily work. Their conviction was deserved."

"It is specious reasoning to say that society is responsible for such an attitude. The dynamiters themselves have made no such plea. They did it for the good of the ironworkers' union. They looked upon themselves, not as criminals, but as being particularly loyal to the cause of unionism. It is now up to the labor unions to repudiate loyalty which manifests itself in this perverted and anarchistic fashion."

"No organization of men," declared Mr. Samuel Gompers in his address as president of the federation, "represents a greater power for the advancement of humanity along right lines. We are not disposed to demand perfection of labor unions any more than of any other organizations. But if President Gompers would have the public value the American Federation of Labor at his estimates of it, they should have repudiated unreservedly the McNamaras and all other dynamiters and those back of them who helped to conceive the plots. Labor has certain rights for which it should contend by all honorable means, but the American Federation ought to have washed their hands of the dynamiters and their methods."

EDITOR TO THE FRONT AGAIN.

Joseph Ettor, who was recently acquitted in Lawrence, Mass., of a charge of murder in having caused the death of a young girl there, is in trouble again, this time in New York City. While there was much incriminating evidence against him in the former charge, the jury decided that there was not enough to convict. The verdict was proclaimed, not only in this country, but in foreign countries, as an example of the impartiality of American justice, as administered through the courts.

The man may not be a murderer, but that he is a strife breeder and a dangerous agitator is unquestioned, says the Arizona Gazette. While he may not have the courage to commit a murder himself, apparently he does not hesitate to suggest it to others. This is what he is accused of now. During a recent talk to the striking waiters in New York, he was quoted as saying:

"If you are compelled to go back under unsatisfactory conditions, go back with a determination to stick together until you get what you want. Go back with your minds made up that it is the unsafe thing in the world for the capitalist to eat food prepared by members of your union."

When questioned afterward as to what he meant by the remark, he was again quoted as saying he "meant" just what he said. There can be no question as to what the real meaning of such an expression is. It is only susceptible of one construction. That is simply another phase of the dynamiting spirit of the iron workers. Whatever quarrel, grievance, or complaint the waiters may have with their employers, the guests are in no way implicated in them, but, as the dynamiters were willing to kill in recent people in their work, so this man Ettor advises the waiters to do the same thing.

When, and just after making the alleged remark, he displayed apparently very great courage. But since it is stated that there is a law on the statute books of New York to cover just such cases as this, he has weakened perceptibly, and is now said to deny having used the language which is attributed to him. He is very willing to have others murdered, but like all of his ilk, he is very solicitous about his own life.

An election has been called in Douglas for the purpose of determining whether or not a new charter shall be provided for that city and for the election of thirteen freeholders who shall be charged with the duty of framing the new charter. The purpose of which is to provide a commission form of government. The selecting of the freeholders to frame the new charter will be a pretty good index as to what will be the result of the effort for an improved form of government. If the politicians of that city are found in control then the chance for improvement will be slim, as a commission form of government in the hands of a political machine would be no better and perhaps worse than the old common council plan.

The Homely Man
The homeliest man I ever saw was Ebenezer Brown. He was a sort of a laughin' stock for folks here in our town. The jokers all told Eben that his face would stop a clock. If he looked at a pan of milk it turned sour from the shock. The gals all turned poor Eben down. They didn't like his style. The jokers' fellows had him beat by many a long mile.

So Eb got mad and went away and stayed for quite a while. And managed to accumulate a neat and nifty pile. The pretty fellows stayed around and flirted with the girls.

One day Eb came back into town on a private car. He had a diamond shirt stud that would twinkle like a star.

Perhaps a little more so than he was in days of yore. But still it dawned upon the pretty fellows mighty quick.

should be put into a deep kettle and heated quickly until a piece of soft bread will brown while counting twenty. A frying basket should be used and four or five croquettes fried at a time. Try to keep the fat the same temperature.

Potato Croquettes

Material—Potatoes, four; cream, three tablespoons; salt, one-half teaspoonful; pepper and cayenne; grated onion, one-half teaspoonful; yolk of egg, one; fat.

Directions—Saucepan, tablespoon, teaspoon, grater, kettle, frying basket, potato ricer.

Nut Croquettes

Material—Bread crumbs, one cup; milk, one-half cup; mixed nuts or walnuts, one cup; yolks of eggs, two; salt and paprika; parsley (chopped), one teaspoonful.

Directions—Soak the stale white bread crumbs in the milk until absorbed. Mix this with all the seasonings and the chopped nuts together. Shape, egg and crumb as directed for potato croquettes and fry in a sauce. Is served with these; should be a tart sauce and form a separate dish, as it takes away the crustiness from the croquettes when the sauce is served from the same dish.
