Sister Mary's KITCHEN

In the kitchen of her own home Sister Mary cooks daily for a family of four adults. She brought to her kitchen an understanding of the chemistry of cooking, gained from study of domestic science in a state university. Consequently the advice she offers is a happy combination of theory and practice. Every recipe she gives is her own, first tried out and served at her family table.

A porch that has become dusty usually looks worse after someone has tried to clean it with a hose and broom than it did when the dust was evenly distributed. The broom is sure to make streaks.

A heavy woolen mop is the best thing to use to really clean a painted porch floor. Use the mop as if it were a broom. It will not be necessary to wring the mop. Then hose the floor well. There will be no dusty broom marks on the floor and the work will not be a bit harder.

It means regular cleaning to keep a living porch clean during the dusty summer months.

DINNER—Broiled white fish, scalloped potatoes, beets with lemon sauce, cucumber salad, cherry brown Betty, coffee.

My Own Recipes.

One way to decide which vegetable to serve with meat is to choose a vegetable opposite in color from the meat. Thus, if the meat is light colored, the vegetable should be dark or vivid in color. This is a safe rule, giving the proper balance to a meal.
SWEETBREADS WITH PEAS.
 2 pairs of sweetbreads,
 2 slices salt pork.

1 slice onion,
 Salt and pepper,
 2 pounds new peas,
 2 tablespoons butter.
 Let sweetbreads stand in cold water for an hour. Parboil in acidulated water for 20 minutes. The onion should be added. Plunge into cold water and let stand until cold. Cut pork into narrow strips about two inches long. Drain sweetbreads, and put strips of pork about an inch apart over top of breads. Put a few pieces of pork in the bottom of a baking pan. Put in sweetbreads, sprinkle with pepper, add a little water and bake in a hot oven for 30 minutes, basting every 10 minutes. Cook peas, season with salt, pepper and butter. Arrange meat on a platter and surround with peas. Serve very hot.

BANANA FILLING.

2 cups milk
 1/2 cup sugar
 2 egg yolks
 1-4 teaspoon salt
 2 tablespoons flour
 1 banana
 Make a custard of the first five ingredients. When cool, add bananas sliced. Put between the layers of a cake. Any plain cake made with one or two whole eggs can be baked in layers.

The latest rival of the champagne appetite is the sugar tooth.

AMOS BETTS RETURNS FROM COAST, WELL

Amos Betts, chairman of the corporation commission, returned yesterday from the California coast, where he has been recuperating from a serious attack of typhoid fever. Mr. Betts was taken ill early in April and for a time all hope for his recovery was abandoned. After weeks when he hovered between life and death there was an improvement and when he had sufficiently recovered he went to the coast, returning practically a well man. Mr. Betts stated that he did not propose getting down to hard work for some little time but that he would be at his desk at the state house keeping in touch with the affairs of the office.

During the last week he was in Los Angeles he experienced six earthquakes, he said, and previous to that had come up from the beach in time to take in three sharp shocks. The first shock of his life came when he was on the ninth floor of the Union league building and there was a great scramble to get out.

"Nine out of ten people are scared to death of the earthquakes and are leaving California in flocks. A bit of warm weather isn't the most comforting thing in the world, they find, and are making reservations to return to Arizona at once. Many who made summer arrangements in Los Angeles are hurrying home and glad to be here."

SAYS PEOPLE GO TOO MUCH.
SAN ANTONIO, Texas—If people stayed at home more there would be fewer divorces, says Judge W. S. Anderson here who has granted 700 divorces in seven years on the bench. "We need new divorce laws but what we need most is the education of folks to what marriage means."

Quaint Frock Combines Lace And Georgette

BY CORA MOORE

New York's Fashion Authority NEW YORK — Fashion has introduced one lace frock after another this season.

In this model, lace is combined with apricot georgette and trousseau ribbons. There is a foundation of cream-colored chiffon. The georgette is hung with a few gathers in a straight line tunic, meeting a panel that alternates lace and ribbon at the back. A bodice of georgette with bertha of lace; an odd slash of georgette edged all around with the lace, tightly quilted, and an exceedingly good looking hat of lace with a flower bedecked crown complete the costume.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

A CALL ON MUNCHIE MOUSE

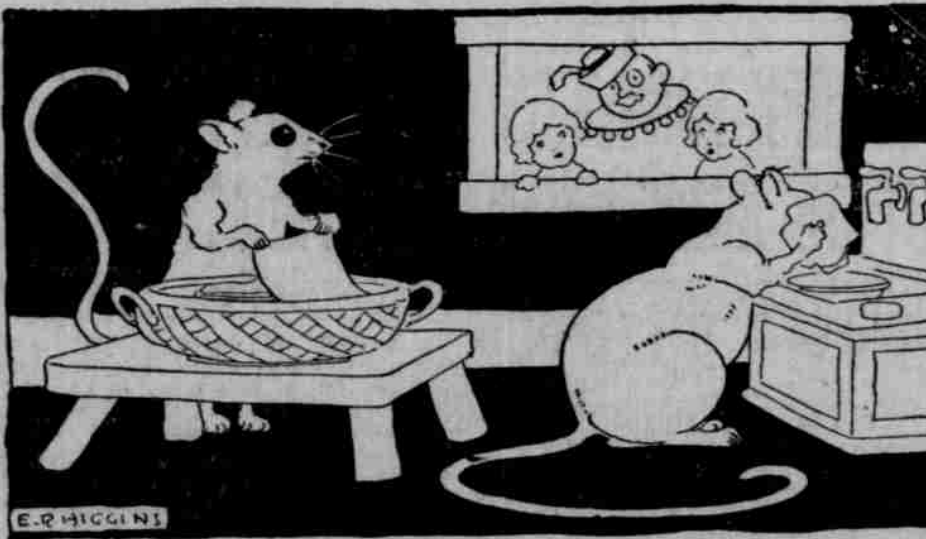

The next person Tingaling went to collect rent from in the Land-Of-Dear-Knows-Where, was Mr. Munchie Mouse, who lived down in the cellar of Maple-Tree Flats, and who also was janitor of the place, collecting garbage and so on.

Mrs. Munchie Mouse was the washer and ironer for all the flats, too, so between them they made a very good living.

It was very convenient for the dwellers in Maple-Tree Apartments to have the Mouses so near, and to make things still nicer, a little dumb-waiter (elevator) ran up and down inside the tree which carried garbage cans and laundry-baskets and furniture when folks were moving in or out.

When Tingaling and Nancy and Nick arrived for the rent, carrying the rent-book, and the large lead pencil, Munchie was just washing up at the kitchen sink, getting ready to eat his dinner, and Mrs. Munchie was folding away the last of the Squirrel family's clothes in their basket, while the coffee boiled.

"Hello, Munchie," called the fairy landlord through the window. "Rent day!"

"Hello, Munchie," called the fairy landlord through the window. "Rent day!"

"Why so it is," answered Munchie rolling down his sleeves and opening the door. "Come in, Mr. Tingaling, won't you?"

"Company's with me," answered the fairman.

"The more the merrier," answered Munchie. "Bring 'em along."

So in they filed, including the Magical Mushroom.

Mrs. Munchie put her laundry-basket on the elevator and pulled the rope. Thereupon the basket, elevator, and all went up, up and up, to the Squirrel family's floor, where it stopped, and the next thing they heard was Mrs. Samantha, dragging the basket off.

"Now," said Mrs. Munchie, untying her apron, "come and sit down, folks while the cheese cakes are hot." Which they all did, but where they got cheese he'll never tell you, unless it might be from the milkweed.

Bob made no comments on the cigarette incident as we walked home under the light of the moon. It was a magnificent evening, but Cynthia herself couldn't have aroused Bob from his gloom that night. My domestic happiness had been seriously jeopardized at rather regular intervals ever since I had been married.

From much bitter experience, I should have learned to avoid the dangerous conflict between Bob's moods and my own pride. Many times had I made a compact with myself: "Let other wives proceed according was happening Bob and I were at odds again!

Bob had absolutely refused to be surprised because I had learned to smoke. He was neither amused nor shocked!

But he seemed to enjoy his own cigarette very much, I observed, as we wandered slowly homeward through the Lorimer park.

"Bob, please give me a cigarette!" I said suddenly.

"To my astonishment, Bob produced his case, I took one out.

"If you will kindly light it for me?" My husband was courteous itself. But, when at last, I had the horrid thing in my own fingers, I threw it away from me.

Bob stopped and watched it balance on the edge of the box edge. And then he seized me in his arms.

"I really didn't want to smoke at all, dearest," I whispered. "I never did!"

Bob kissed me, and ended further explanations.

"You make me awfully glad, darling," he whispered. "I do love you so — when you are your own sweet natural self, you know. But when you try to be like other girls — when you pose, my dear — well, you can see for yourself, what's bound to happen."

I could see that, for myself. And I could see something else, too, for other women as well as for myself.

If I had a child to take care of, I wouldn't go around hunting for silly fads. And I wouldn't be worrying, half of the time, about whether my husband loved me or not. I would simply take it for granted that he was perfectly wild about me — as the mother of his child!

Motherhood, I considered a profession, and the most difficult one, to fill adequately, that any human being can undertake. I had my ideals about it. And I didn't think that any woman was fit to undertake it without certain ideals.

Ann had none and yet she was the potential mother, I felt sure. It would be exactly like a perverse fate to bless her with a Lorimer heir!

What if she — who cared nothing for children — were to have a son — while I had none?

In face of this stupendous possibility, what did my little flare over smoking amount to?

Nothing at all!

And Bob had been out of patience with me because I was so trivial! It was the silly little cigarette — it was the state of mind which found satisfaction in such a silly fad that offended a man like my Bob!

"Don't weep so, darling. The incident is closed, sweetheart." Bob threw away his own cigarette.

"I'm crying about something much more important," I protested.

"What darling? Tell me!"

"I suppose — if we were to have a son — we would name him for your father?"

"We would. And the name would be worth just $1,000,000 to the boy, my dear!"

Have More Time for Yourself

MANY women find their hours so completely occupied by their domestic duties, they have no time for "play."

And no wonder! In many homes the cooking is still being done on a wasteful, dirty, smoky stove. If there is anything that burns up more time, as well as fuel, we don't know of it! Cook stoves, of the old work-making type, are relics of primitive, pioneer days.
