COTTON PICKING IN FULL SWING IN THREE WEEKS

About Half a Dozen Loads Of Long Staple Already Have Been Delivered to Gins In the Valley This Season

With the 1920 long staple cotton picking season not yet open, Arizona's greatest season in acreage and yield, at least half a dozen loads of long staple of the new crop have been brought to gins in the Salt River valley, it was learned yesterday through representatives of local cotton companies. From now on, cotton men say, cotton will be coming in at intervals until quantity deliveries to the gins begin in two or three weeks.

Cotton growers are busy now getting ready for the big harvest, securing their pickers, preparing to take care of the "white gold" and to transport it to the gins. In two or three weeks there will be no busier place in the country than the Salt River valley, cotton men agree.

Since the first load of 1920 cotton was brought in to the Southwest Cotton company here a week ago last Saturday, othtr loads have come in until the total so far is about six, O. P. Johnson, of the Southwest Cotton company, said yesterday. Yesterday a load of cotton arrived at the company's Maarinetta gin, while the first cotton of the season at Mesa was brought in the day before yesterday.

Volunteer Cotton Coming in

While the 1920 cotton season is yet hardly open, cotton men said, it is nearly so. All the cotton brought in to date is of the volunteer crop, and volunteer cotton will be coming in in quantity by the first of September. The regular crop will be arriving at gins by the middle of next month.

As nearly as could be learned yesterday, the Southwest Cotton company is the only local company to receive cotton so far. The Martin Cotton company, however, has contracted for cotton for October delivery. So far as anybody knew yesterday, no quotations have been made on seed cotton.

Cotton men yesterday reported little change in prospects for the crop in recent weeks. Improvement has been shown during the summer, after the late spring and the yield will be satisfactory, though probably a little less per acre than last year. The general estimate on the yield this year is around 75,000 bales for the 180,000 acres in the valley.

AMUSEMENTS

Riverside Park

Tonight and tomorrow nights are diamond ring nights at Arizona's most popular amusement center, and some lady will receive on each of the nights, a genuine diamond ring, set in a 14-kt. solid gold mounting. These nights are proving very popular with the patrons of this famous resort. Numbered tickets are given the ladies as they enter the dance floor, and from these numbers, one is drawn. The lucky holder receives the diamond ring. There are no conditions—no strings on the ofier—it is just what its name implies—a diamond ring prize awarded the lady holding the lucky number. The drawing takes place immediately after the 10:30 dance.

Friday night is balloon night, and on this occasion the capital prize will be the $50 merchandise order on the French Shop, when this popular shopping center hangs up the prize. The order will be redeemable for either a dress, a suit or a coat.

Watch for Cinderella night! It'll be a riot.

William Russell at the Ramona

William Russell leads off the bill at the Ramona for today and tomorrow—offering "The Lincoln Highwayman." In this offering this clever boy assumes the role of a supposed highwayman, but maintaining the atmosphere of the modern ocean to ocean highway, this particular road agent uses gasoline as his mode of travel, and commits his crimes either from the comfortble seat of a fashionable automobile, or from astride a motorcycle, his victims including the wealthy tourists who journey along the famous highway. On one occasion, a fashionable party is held up and robbed—the girl of the party instinctively feeling a decided interest in the dashing fellow whose prowess and bravery were responsible for the audacious deed. This interest grew on her until she was obsessed with an idea of again seeing her "prince charming." This decision leads up to the thrilling action which marks the closing episodes of the unusual story, and paves the way for the denoument which is as surprising as it is original.

Lila Lee at the Hip

Lila Lee, known affectionately as "Cuddles" and the girl whose interpretation in "Male and Female" was one of the outstanding successes in that production, finishes her engagement at the Hip today, appearing in "Rustling a Bride"—her latest Paramount-Artcraft picture. It is a romance of youth and adventure, interspersed with much rapid action, and several tense situations. Lila Lee is perfectly delightful in the leading role, and the supporting cast has been selected with a view of bringing to each character the very best type and talent obtainable, with the result that "Rustling a Bride" will be counted as one of Lila Lee's greatest picture successes. The added attractions are a western drama—"The Hobo of Pizen City" and the Christie comedy. Tomorrow starts the engagement of Catherine Calvert in "The Career of Katherine Bush"—Elinor Glyn's famous sister story to "Three Weeks."

The False Road" at the Strand

Today marks the final showing at the Strand of Enid Bennett, appearing in "The False Road." Those who remember her wonderful success in "Stepping Out" and "What Every Woman Learns" will be pleased to learn that the present vehicle is another glowing tribute to the versatility of this charming girl, whose every picture fairly radiates talent in its highest expression. "The False Road" is a story of the underworld of New York, staged amid the environment of the great city and unfolded in the atmosphere of modern life; its characters are all drawn from the everyday type of people and its plot is intensly human. There are spots of the highest dramatic tension, and then with the deft hands of the experienced actress at director, that tension is relieved by some clever bit of genuine comedy and a period of lighter and refreshing vivaciousness, all leading up to the tremendous climax.

On the same program the Strand is screening "A Parcel Post Husband" and the Pathe News.

Constance Talmadge at Columbia

Constance Talmadge proves that a woman can get anything she wants if she only knows how to go about it, as you will see in "Two Weeks," A picture taken from "At the Barn," Anthony Wharton's play, which will be shown at the Columbia Theater beginning today.

Miss Talmadge, as Lillums, a show girl, flees from an escort who has been rude and winds up at the home of three crusty bachelors. The grave old butler is horrified at her appearance and tells her no women are allowed on the premises. Nothing daunted she shows him a slight thorn bruise and pretends to be suffering.

The butler falls at once and in his sympathy takes her to the bath room. Then Lillums is caught by the owners who are shocked at the very thought of her intrusion. But a flirty smile and a toss of her pretty head wins two of them to her cause and she settles down for a visit. And the third bachelor? Well she vamps him plenty before her two weeks stay is finished.

It is the story of a chorus girl who wins her way to the stardom and then gives up the stage because she has found something more to her liking.

THOMAS MADDOCK GETS IN RACE FOR THE U. S. SENATE

C. M. Roberts Decides He Will Not Try for Governor Nomination—List of State And County Candidates

They're off. The last of the petitions of candidates for nominations before the primaries of the two parties were filed yesterday, the last day when that formality could be complied with under the law. Nearly all the nominating papers had been previously filed, but great interest was attached to those that had not been filed, and one of them never was. That was the petition of Hon. Charles W. Roberts for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Another that was filed and which caused much interest was the petition of Thomas Maddock for the nomination for United States senator on the Republican ticket.

There was a rumor Tuesday night that Mr. Roberts would withdraw from the three-cornered contest, but it could not be confirmed and Mr. Roberts himself yesterday morning declined to offer a definite reply to inquiry concerning his intentions. The impression left, however, was that he would remain in the running. Late in the afternoon it was expected that his papers, which it was known were complete, would be presented. In the evening he put an end to speculation concerning his intentions by the issuance of the following statement:

"Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 18.

"Believing that no Democrat can afford to consider personal interest above that of his party, I have decided to withdraw from the contest for the Democratic nomination for governor.

"I wish to assure my many friends that their loyalty has been appreciated and it will always remain one of my pleasant memories.

"C. M. ROBERTS."

Aid to Winsor

The commonly expressed judgment of the effect of Mr. Roberts' withdrawal is that it has greatly increased the chances of the nomination of Mulford Winsor. Both he and Mr. Roberts were regarded as residuary legatees of the political estate of former Governor Hunt and while it was assumed that Mr. Winsor was the most favored heir, there was no doubt that there had been left to Mr. Roberts a handsome legacy which will now revert to Mr. Winsor.

But it will not be a clear net gain for Mr. Winsor. In some parts of the state it was understood that there was a considerable element of Democrats who were regarded as conservative who had turned to Mr. Roberts. That was especially true of Cochise, his home county. This vote, now, it is thought, is much more likely to be diverted to Mit Simms. Then there is the vote of the cattlemen, most of which is counted for Simms, though it was known that Mr. Roberts, himself a cattleman, had quite a following and that, too, is much more likely to turn to Simms than to Winsor. But putting one thing against another, Winsor is generally regarded as the beneficiary of Roberts' withdrawal.

Maddock's Move No Surprise

The candidacy of Mr. Maddock for United States senator was not a surprise, though it created a great deal of surprise a week ago when the first rumors of it were spread. Mr. Maddock has had this step in mind for some time. Members of his party who were very friendly to him urged against it on the ground that he had waited too long. He replied that he was not proposing to make the race to gratify a personal ambition.

On the contrary, he said that he desired to get out of politics and had long considered doing so to evote himself to his own more remunerative affairs. The business of the state engineering department, of which he had been the head for the last two years, a salary, small in comparison with the returns of a private business in which he would engage, was now in excellent shape and he could leave it without feeling that he had deserted the post which he had occupied at a sacrifice. But things, he said, had so shaped themselves in the Republican party; that is, in the contest for the senatorial nomination, that he believed that whether he should succeed or not in securing the nomination, he could be of service to his party.

Following is the list of candidates for the various offices from which voters may choose on September 7, that is, voters who have registered as Democrats or Republicans:

THIS FIGHT WAS A PRIVATE AFFAIR

SACRAMENTO—Damon and Pythias had nothing on John Ruby and Robert Allen, pals here. Pinched for fighting in the street, Ruby went to jail, while Allen went out to rustle up bail. In court Allen protested he "didn't gnow anything about the fight," although he had a four-inch cut across his eye. Ruby had Allen in the gutter and was kicking his head, the cops said.

TO BRING BARBOA INTO COURT TODAY

Jesus Maria Barboa yesterday was arrainged before Justice McKee on a formal charge of murder in connection with his alleged confession of the slaying if Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Erhardt on the night of June 6. The Mexican will be examined on the charge this morning at 10 o'clock. He was placed in the county jail last night under a bond of $1500, which he could not furnish.

Barboa was brought from the state hospital yesterday afternoon and at this hearing today all the evidence that the officers have gathered since he made his alleged confession on the night of June 26, will be presented to the court. All alibi witnesses for the Mexican will also testify. This hearing, it is believed by the officers will help clear up any doubt as to the innocense of the Mexican. It is the opinion of the officers that he is insane. For several weeks he has been an inmate of the state asylum here.

In Great Britain until 1827, stealing a sheep was punishable by death.
