Taft For League But Opposed to Arbitrary Stand of President Wilson on Reservations

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 9.—Election of Warren G. Harding to the presidency of the United States will mean the ultimate ratification of the league of nations, with reservations, and "the elimination of all further dispute," William Howard Taft, former president of the United States, stated upon his arrival here today at the head of the arbitration board of the Grand Trunk-Pacific railway.

"Governor Cox has asked me how I can support Senator Harding when the senator has denounced the league of nations," said Mr. Taft. "Cox is not quite right. Harding will mean the election of Senator Harding will mean the adoption of a league of nations with reservations and the ending of all further dispute."

Mr. Taft said that while he was personally in favor of the league of nations and was willing to accept it as presented by President Wilson with Article 10, he added that he was "bitterly disappointed when the president did not accept the reservations voted by the Republicans, who, with a few Democratic, constituting a majority in the senate. He said recent statements of Lord Grey in a letter to the Times at the time the reservations were under discussion, indicated that there was no doubt that the United States could have entered the league with the consent of the other nations."

SENATOR HARDING ATTACKS ROOSEVELT'S FOREIGN POLICY IN DEMOCRATIC STRONGHOLD

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 9.—Again thrusting at the foreign policy of the Wilson administration, Senator Harding tonight attacked the Democratic stronghold of Oklahoma, saying that while the American government was beguiling them with idealistic notions of a new world order, the other nations had social, economic and industrial power to dominate commerce and industry through control of the petroleum supply.

British interests, he declared, had put their hands on petroleum resources in many quarters, foreseeing a day when oil would become the mainstay of material progress. He said it was high time the United States also gave attention to material well being and stood behind American promoters.

Senator Harding's night speech, last of his mid-western trip, was delivered at the state fair grounds. Earlier he had made several rear platform speeches on his way across Kansas and Oklahoma.

At Ponca City, Okla., when a farmer handed up a printed circular quoting him as advocating dollar wheat, the candidate characterized the statement as "misleading, silly old lie," and as a "misrepresentation of the facts," crumpling up the paper tossed it back into the crowd.

"Praising American genius and enterprise in its development of American petroleum resources, the senator attacked the world's metropolis of petroleum."

"But the star of petroleum's empire travels always from the United States to newly opened territory," he declared. "New friends must be opened and before many years we will be compelled to draw upon other countries."

From idealism to reality "We must turn again now, after an excursion of some eight years into the realm of lofty and noble, to most enabling idealism to a narrow, practical, realistic life."

"The plain fact is that while our government has been attempting to organize a new society, other nations have been looking about for the means to dominate petroleum production, because they might find the power to control the world."

FOUR BROOKLYN TWIRLERS TRY TO CHECK INDIAN OFFENSIVE BUT SPOKE'S CREW REFUSED TO BE STOPPED IN FOURTH ADVANCE.

LEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 9.—The Cleveland Indians massacred the Brooklyn Robins in the fourth game of the world's series today, winning, five to one, and tying the struggle for the 1920 baseball championship, as each team has won two games and the battle will be renewed tomorrow with the American leaguers the favorites.

The tribe of Speaker evidently burished up its collective war clubs returning from Brooklyn and fell on the Robins with an attack that swept the easterners off their feet and brought unlimited joy to the thousands of fans who had been waiting for the awakening of the home club.

While the Indians were battering four Brooklyn pitchers to a frazzle, Stanley Coveleskie held the invaders almost helpless in the grasp of his evasive ball and five hits were collected from the former miner's delivery. In almost every inning the Robins went out in order, so perfect was his control and the defense of his teammates that but three Superbas were left stranded and only one, Jimmy Johnston, completed the circuit.

The game was played in perfect weather, the afternoon being not many bleacherites sat in their shirt-sleeves. There was not a cloud in the sky and not enough breeze to move the autumn haze in the late summer atmosphere. Long before the start every part of the cheaper seat sections was filled and trees and telegraph poles near the ground threatened to topple under their burden of youthful fans. Neighboring house-tops, too, bore full quotas of men and women, while every window overlooking the park was packed with faces.

Inside the park the fans showed all the evidence of world series enthusiasm. Bells, rattles and a well organized auto horn chorus helped to keep the enthusiasm at top pitch through the first three innings. After scoring the first four runs it was realized that with Coveleskie pitching winning was merely a matter of good defensive play and the fans, relieved of all anxiety, put their noise making instruments aside and settled back to enjoy the game.

Every good play was liberally applauded, however, whether by a Cleveland or Brooklyn player. It was a Robin who made the most of the bit of fielding for the fans to enjoy. In the fourth Evans lifted a low drive over second, which appeared certain to go for a Texas leaguer, but Myers, rushing in from deep center, reached the ball. Lack of second and slipped his hands under it just before it touched the ground and came up after a somersault with the ball sticking in his gloved hand. Myers was given a long, hearty cheer.

A clever piece of baseball strategy which slipped by unnoticed by the fans was perpetrated by Griffith in the seventh. After Burns walked, Gardner drove a high drive to right field. Griffith played the ball as though he expected to make a fly put-out and Burns watching the attitude of the ball, was slow in starting for second. The ball, however, passed far over Griffith's head and he then quickly turned and picked it off the wall on the rebound with the result that Burns was held at third and Gardner at first.

With cheers of their supporters ringing in their ears the Indians got away to a two-run lead in the first inning. Cleveland started to make the team feel that the entire section was behind it and believed explicitly in its ability to win out.
