TOKYO, Nov. 14.—Premier Hara, addressing 5,000 of his supporters today said that no question had been more keenly watched than the anti-Japanese legislation in California. He declared it would be regrettable if the question affected the good relations of Japan and the United States, but that a conflict was unthinkable.

Squire Harpington was listening in as his good wife gave the first over to the evening newspaper.

The Forgetful Doc
Simon Towne and Dr. Pillsan Powders got along together as well as two strange cats tied by the tails to the clothes line.
"Doc," chirped Mr. Towne this morning, "I read about you in the paper."
"I read about you," said the doctor, "who has sued her doctor for going away after the operation he had performed on her and forgetting his forceps."
"Couldn't she have sent them back to his office without going to the trouble of suing him to make him come for them?" Doc Powders exclaimed.
"No," replied Mr. Towne, "she could not do that because the doctor had sewed the forceps up inside her."

LATEST MAKE-UP TRICKS
LONDON—Green powder, yellow rouge, blue eye cream and brown lips. These are some of the new color schemes in the gentle art of facial make-up as taught by a beauty expert who has recently returned from Paris to London.
"A beauty specialist must be an artist as well as a sculptor nowadays," she says. "She must mold the face to beautiful contours with strong gentle fingers, and she must have an artist's eye for harmonizing rouges and powders with skins of different shades and character."
A green powder is used now to cover up red veins around the nose. Yellow rouge is for a dark skin and blends with it "so as to give a healthy glow."
A fair young skin takes the blossom rouge, while for weather-beaten skins sherry rouge is selected.

French women are using blue cream at night but black in the daytime for the region of the eye. And there is the new beauty mask for tired business or professional women who must go to a dance or dinner after a day's work. "She mixes the powder with the water and puts it on like paste. It's hardened and then steams it off, and the wrinkles and fatigue lines go with it."

PUBLIC MEETING OF SURGEONS TO BE HELD TONIGHT

Everybody Invited To Hear Noted Speakers At Session of American College Of Surgeons Here—Two-Day Program

Some of the country's best known surgeons and instructors in surgery will meet at the high school auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight to open a two-day convention of the Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons. The session is noteworthy from the fact that it is the first annual meeting of its kind to be held in the Arizona section and because of the broad scope of its program which holds an interest for the layman as well as the professional. The public is invited to attend.

Headquarters for the convention are being maintained at the Hotel Adams where all fellows and guests are requested to register upon their arrival here. Surgical clinics will be conducted at the St. Joseph hospital from 9 o'clock this morning until noon, when the visitors will be entertained at the golf course and taken for motor rides about the valley.

John G. Bowman, director of the American College of Surgeons; Dr. Franklin H. Martin, secretary-general of the American College of Surgeons; Dr. Frederic A. Besley, professor of surgery, Northwestern University medical school, and others prominent in their profession arrived last night. The men will speak at similar conferences to be held in San Francisco, Salt Lake City and Denver.

According to Mr. Bowman, this meeting in Phoenix is one of a series of public meetings to be held in every state in the union and every province in Canada for the purpose of promoting improvement in the practice of surgery, to afford the best service known to the profession and to enlighten the public along the lines of preventive medicine.

The meeting tonight will be open to all and the addresses will be non-technical so that all may clearly understand the facts which will be presented and the valuable advice which will be offered. All expenses of these meetings is to be met by the central office of the college.

The time has come when the people need intelligent medical leadership. This meeting in Phoenix is one of a series of public meetings to be held in every state in the union and every province of Canada. The American College of Surgeons' fellowship of over 5,000 prominent surgeons in the United States, Canada and South America, pledged to improve the practice of surgery, to discourage incompetent college surgeons, to give the best service known to the science of medicine for every man, woman and child in need of surgical treatment, and to enlighten the public along the lines of preventive medicine and public health.

"If you must undergo a serious surgical operation in which, even under the best of conditions, there is a big chance that you will not recover, is not the fact that you are in the hands of the best of surgeons too good for you? Have you a right to the best? Have you a right to be well?"

"To answer these questions in the way you want them answered is the business of the doctors. They are doing more today to answer these questions right than was ever true before in history. They are getting results and the proof of getting results is known as hospital standardization.

"You say that you have a right to justice, a right to be free from violence, and so on. You create a court to protect your right to justice. There is an analogy between the service of the courts to the public and the service of the medical profession, which makes clear what hospital standardization is. He seeks out the facts and guides in some instances by a jury finally makes his decision. The entire procedure of each case becomes then a public record. That record is subject to review by other courts, up to the Supreme court. The entire process is designed to establish justice; and the importance of it here lies in its provisions against error or the miscarriage of justice."

The Doctor's Duty
In a similar way the medical profession is in service to the public. Each doctor is a judge. He presides over our right to be well. If he is worthy of his trust he must be a man of integrity, of impartial devotion to his patient's welfare, and of intelligence. The requisite training of a doctor today is long and most exact. But this training is merely the prerequisite to practice. In practice the doctor must seek out the facts relevant to each case. Upon these facts rest the diagnosis and treatment. It errors occur either in diagnosis or treatment they are most difficult to review or to correct. Surgery, especially, admits of no appeal. Each success or failure is usually final. In this matter the law obviously has an advantage. To reduce all errors or all failures for whatever reasons, therefore, in the practice of medicine and of surgery to the lowest percentage is the first business of the medical profession and through hospital standardization the profession seeks both the practical means and speed in the realization of this aim.

"Backed by the common experience of practice, doctors today unanimously agree that if they are to create the highest service of which the profession is capable, they must at regular intervals review what they have done, what mistakes or other failures if any, occurred, and why. They must know that the same mistakes do not occur a second time through avoidable reasons. In other words, the doctor's obligation is to grasp in a regular and orderly way the benefit of his experience and to apply the ever increasing wisdom gained by this process to his work. Further, the doctor's debt to his profession, to himself, and to society, requires that he benefit also by the clinical experience of his colleagues. The common experience of his colleagues in his; and his experience is theirs. To use common experience rightly is to use common sense, and as wise in the practice of medicine there is no debate."
