Capital Chatter

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The railroad problem is causing President Harding more concern than the question of German reparations.

Harding makes no secret of his conviction that the railroad situation is most serious of all the problems now facing America.

But Harding finds his hands absolutely tied in dealing with the railroads.

Railroad legislation is, by law, in the hands of the Interstate Commerce commission and the Railroad Labor board.

The president has indicated that he rather thought it would be necessary to go over the heads of these bodies.

This can mean only an appeal to congress for emergency legislation.

Hence the question probably will be raised May 10, when the Interstate Commerce commission of the senate begins its railroad inquiry.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has evolved a new political doctrine that should be written in history.

"Politics is best served by good service."

It is by that creed that he is endeavoring to gauge the applications for appointments in his department.

WRESTLING

country in the movies. The impression is given that most if not all the bombs found their mark.

"Fairly fair," say the navy officers. And so the lid has been clamped on further picture practice for Mitchell's bombing propaganda.

The pictures of the hits—not of the misses—are being shown all over the country.

Mitchell's men tried for three days, recently, to drop bombs on the old battleship Indiana. The movie men were on the job and wasted thousands of feet of film without recording a hit.

Persistence triumphed at last, however, and one afternoon in quick succession two bombs landed on the Indiana's deck.
