Denver's harvest of suicides is booming as usual. If secrecy denotes concealed success Wolcott's bimetallic mission is destined to be the wonder of the world.

The Greeks will refrain from paying tribute in song to the gods for a short time and pay cash tributes to the Turks.

The president had better appoint another commission to find out what good Commissioner Calhoun has done.

If an election were held tomorrow, McKinley would receive about as many votes as there has been federal plums to give out.

Senator Tillman's so-called "breach of senatorial courtesy" in urging an investigation of the sugar dealings of the members may be very creditably indefinitely continued.

President McKinley will shortly give another example of Republican acrobatics by means of a Cuban message. He's dropping rapidly into the ways of his illustrious predecessor.

It was reported from Ohio recently that Hanna was effecting an organization which would insure his own election to the senate and the renomination of President McKinley in 1900. He will find when it comes to insuring McKinley's reelection to the presidency that the premium is a little high.

The associated press despatches are responsible for the very remarkable statement that Speaker Reed, on account of Representative Shafroth's winning the last chess game of the international series with England, addressed him in the following terms: "Old man, the next time you want to make one of your sixteen to one speeches, let me know, and you shall have full swing. A fellow who can put up such a game of chess as you did, must not hide his light under a bushel." On the whole, however, this seems consistent with the arbitrary actions of the chief mogul of the house.

The sidewalk up Twelfth street to the university hill was much needed this week and there was little reason for its not being completed. Work was begun on April 1st and the job has dragged along, causing the greatest inconvenience to the attendants at the university and the residents on the hill. It would have cost no more to put a proper number of men at work and pushed it to completion or if the plan being pursued at present best conserves the interests of all in the opinion of the city, the old walk could have been left to serve as a temporary accommodation.

One attending the university exercises during the past week and witnessing the large crowds that were daily present, might be led to wonder why a change to town should need to be suggested in order to secure a larger crowd.

An Answer. Louisville, Colo., June 3, 1897.

To the Editor of the Boulder Camera, Dear Sir:—The Camera of May 27th contained a letter dated at Lafayette and purporting to give certain information to the public concerning the affairs of the Industrial Coal Mining and Mercantile company.

The writer, whoever he may be, must be either ignorant of the facts or delights in misrepresenting them through malice. No person, of good sense, would attempt to inform the public on a matter of which he is entirely ignorant as in this case.

The statement is made that I made contracts with a certain Denver party which were to the detriment of the Industrial company. In that the writer no doubt desires to attack my integrity. I beg to state that no contracts were ever signed by me as president of the Industrial company, without being fully authorized by the stockholders of the company at meetings of the stockholders where all were present.

The writer states that J. Carruthers of Lafayette was mentioned as the choice of half of the directors for receiver. The object of this, no doubt was to show that the company was divided into two factions. I beg to state that Mr. Carruthers was not at any time mentioned for receiver by any one of the directors of the Industrial company. Whatever information the writer may have of a division in the company, I do not know, but I may say that at the last meeting of the stockholders of the Industrial company, every matter voted on was adopted or rejected by a unanimous vote. Very respectfully J. H. HOOD.

McKinley Prosperity. The Westinghouse employees in Pennsylvania who went to Canton last fall to trample on McKinley's lawn and shout for sound money are now coming to their senses. First they suffered a 25 per cent. reduction of wages and then the works closed down indefinitely, throwing them all out of employment. A few days ago, and as a result of this last wavelet of good times they proceeded to tear down all kinds of McKinley banners and mottoes still hanging about the works, to the accompaniment of cheers for Bryan and promises to vote right next time. 'Tis to be hoped they will remember the lesson and endeavor to impress it upon their fellows in that state who made up that suicidal majority for pretended sound money last fall.—Leadville Herald Democrat.

Too Conscientious. "The thing for you to do, madam," said the attorney, "is to bring suit against the woman for alienating your husband's affections. She has means, and you can, undoubtedly, recover heavy pecuniary damages from her."

"Would I have to put a money value on my husband's affections?" inquired the client. "Certainly. And you need not fear to make the figure very large."

"I am not under oath, am I?" "Not at all. This is merely a consultation." "Well, then, you may sue the woman for—I guess you may make it as high as $75."—Chicago Tribune.

Not Congenial. "Aren't you afraid your husband will be fascinated by that pretty widow next door?" "No danger; he likes a garden, and she keeps chickens."—Chicago Record.

He Got a Seat. A well-known actor tells an amusing story of a man who entered the bar-parlor of a country inn on a cold day. A group of loungers were huddled about the fire, and the stranger could not get near enough to keep warm.

"Got any oysters?" he asked the landlord, and receiving an affirmative reply, said: "Take a dozen out to my horse." All hands crowded to the door to see the horse eat oysters, and the stranger secured the most comfortable seat. The landlord returned soon, and said the horse refused to eat the shellfish. "Well, give 'em to me, then," said the foxy visitor, secure in his resting place.—Tit-Bits.
