WAR REPORTERS.

A Plea That Their Presence Would Prevent Barbarities.

Of the wounded Japanese who fall into Russia's hands, and the unaccounted for—excepting those who are caught playing the spy—I can speak with confidence, and say that they are well treated. I had an Asiatic servant for a while who had been a bearer in the fighting line, and though he was not in any way overburdened with love for the Russians, he bore testimony to their unflinching kindness to their enemies when the latter fell into their hands.

Most of us can remember how mischief-makers on the Continental press tried during the Boer war to make the world believe that we ill-treated the enemy's wounded, holding us up to the scorn and contempt of humanity. We all of us knew at the time that this was false. We have proved it false to the whole world since, but we have not yet forgotten our traducers. It will do us no harm to remember this as the present war goes on. I know that the strictest orders have been given by officers of the highest rank to the troops to deal kindly with the wounded after an action. That many terrible deeds will be done in hot blood on both sides there can be but small room to doubt. When men get to the crossing of bayonets all that is devilish in their blood is apt to come uppermost. At that state a man is no better than a tiger, and many tigerish deeds may be expected. But in cold blood I do not believe that the Russians will lay rough hands upon the fallen.

To explain just what I mean, let me say that I should not care to be in the enemy's trenches when a regiment of the Highland brigade or the Grenadiers or the Dublin Fusiliers stormed in with the bayonet. At the same time, I do not think I should have an atom of fear of what might happen later if I lay in those trenches among the wounded.

Yet it must be admitted that one of the great safeguards of civilization has been removed since the war correspondents of the world have been prevented from going into the firing line to see for themselves what happens. At present the world has to take a general's word for it that he did not at any time behave like a fiend to helpless foes, and ex-parte evidence is never of a thoroughly satisfactory character. Commanders complain that cabled news may upset their plans. Well, stop the cables! but let the letters go! let one man from each journal of repute look on and chronicle the things to be seen, and many a deed of unnecessary savagery will be prevented by the mere presence of the pressmen, for no nation can afford to stand before the world devoid of honor, of chivalry or of mercy.

In the interests of the wounded men who fall in battle I think this point should be taken up by the whole world's press, for the exclusion of the war correspondent from the field of battle is a step backward toward darkness, not from a mere newgatherer's point of view, but in the interests of humanity. The press that only desires cable news to increase its circulation may very well be dismissed, either on the score of humanity or utility, but the unemotional press that is content, as of old time, with dispassionate letters, should not be kept from the scene when events that are likely to affect the world at large are impending.—London News.
