PORTO RICO.

The first American flag was set up in Porto Rico sixteen years ago to day, July 25, 1898, by a small force of men from the U. S. S. Gloucester, commanded by Lieut.-Commander Richard Wainwright. The village of Quianica, fifteen miles west of Ponce, was the scene of the historic flag-raising. The Gloucester opened the festivities of the first Porto Rican flag day by throwing a few shells into the hills back of the town. Two boats' crews were then sent ashore, under Lieutenants Huse, Wood and Norman and Pharmacist Brown. They were armed with an automatic gun, but the natives made only slight resistance, and the whole affair was bloodless, save for the accidental shooting of two Porto Ricans and a cow. A yeoman named Lacey and Chief Quartermaster Bechtold were entrusted with the task of hauling down the red and yellow banner of Spain and hoisting the Stars and Stripes. A rock barricade, named Fort Wainwright, was thrown up to protect the flag, and two men were appointed to sit on a pulpitry coop and guard the banner. Later in the day a part of the army was landed, and soon the whole force of 16,972, comprising the Porto Rican army of occupation, was ready for business. Gen. Miles was in command, but Gen. Wilson was the first army officer to land, and he was welcomed with cheers by the natives.

CHOCOTAS WANT TO DISBAND.

More than 200 leading members of the Choctaw Indian tribe met in St. Louis, Mo., to prepare a memorial to Congress, asking that the tribe be dissolved and the funds held in trust by the federal government distributed among the tribesmen. The action is in line with that taken by the Cherokee nation, which already has been disbanded.

CHANGE IN COMMAND.

"Before Simpson got married he used to command a good salary."
"And now?"
"Now he only earns it; his wife commands it."—Boston Transcript.

A PARADOX.

"It takes a long, strong climb to reach success."
"Yes, and the only way to reach it is by keeping on the level."—Houston Post.

BELYING ITS NAME.

"Samantha, what's that chime the orchestra's a-playin' now?"
"The program says it's Choppin', Hiram."
"—mebbe—but ter me it sounds a deal more like sawin'."—Penn. State Froth.
