FROM BRAKEMAN TO POSITION OF $25,000 A YEAR COMMISSION IS FAVORED BY GOVERNOR FOSS

A. R. Whaley Now Vice President Of New Haven Road And Next To Mellen

Takes Over All Operating Responsibility Of Freight And Passenger Traffic

Adelbert R. Whaley, known to railroad men simply as A. R., who for seven years has been manager of the Grand Central Terminal in New York, was elected "vice-president in charge of operation" of the New Haven railroad yesterday at a directors' meeting. President Mellen was in the chair.

Mr. Whaley assumes his new duties on February 1, and he alone will be responsible for the passenger and freight traffic. If there is improvement in operation Mr. Whaley will be credited with it, if there are mistakes or accidents he will get the blame. Mr. Mellen will yield responsibility for passenger or freight operation on Feb. 1.

At the Grand Central it was said that Mr. Whaley's new office is second only to that of President Mellen in responsibility. The new operating vice-president ranks the president. Mr. Whaley will transfer operating headquarters of the system from New Haven to the Grand Central Terminal. He severs all connection with the New Haven Central, the railroad's predecessor to take up his duties for the Central will be settled by Monday next.

"Have any recent criticisms," Mr. Whaley was asked, "caused President Mellen to wish to be relieved of the responsibility of operating the railroad?" "Not at all," the new operating vice-president answered promptly. "If that were the cause of my election, I am sure it would be reasonable to suppose that the change would have been made a month or two ago, when the criticisms you have in mind were being heard."

"The new office is merely a part of the new system of management which has been going on successfully for some time, a part of the new system of management. New York is a pretty big place, the Harlem River yards form one of the biggest, doubtless the biggest, single enterprise of the entire system, and this terminal, which we share with the Grand Central, is a tremendous thing, and the directors have decided that it makes for systematic operation to have the operating headquarters here on the spot."

Born near Providence, nearly fifty years ago, Mr. Whaley began his railroad career when sixteen years old as a freight car driver. He worked at Providence and Worcester road, and received $1,422 a day. In turn he worked as baggage master, freight agent, passenger conductor, trainmaster, yardmaster and general agent at Providence of all the railroads centering around the city. He was also in charge of the Providence yards he became superintendent of the Worcester Division of the New Haven road. In 1904 Mr. Whaley became superintendent of the New York Division of the New Haven road. The New York and New York Central roads as their respective directors have decided that the financial change within thirty-four years.

HORN GOES FEB. 1. The New Haven road announced yesterday that President Horn will devote his entire time to the Boston & Maine road, of which he is to be vice-president.

ICE TREATMENT TO STOP FRUIT TREES BUDDING. Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 25.—Will F. Thomas, an orchardist near here, believes the "ice treatment" has saved his fruit trees from premature budding during the unreasonable warm weather of the present winter. When other farmers in the neighborhood discovered the springlike warmth of the air, starting their trees to bud, Thomas hustled off to town and returning with about a ton of ice. He packed and salted around the base of each bearing tree in his orchard, reworking it as the ice melted away. As a result none of the trees showed any signs of budding.

ICE TREATMENT TO STOP FRUIT TREES BUDDING. The ice treatment was continued over two days of the "summers" weather. The cost, the man estimated today, was 15 cents per tree. He said he would prefer to wait until next year when his trees should properly bud before passing final opinion on the success of his plan. Thomas got his idea by noting California growers building fires for frost prevention and figured he might reverse the process with success.

His Plan Unfolded at Conference of New England Executives, Today

How He Would Regulate Railroads and Enforce Efficient Service

Boston, Jan. 25.—With the exception of Gov. Haines, of Maine, the Governors of the New England States met at the Hotel Touraine, today, at the suggestion of Gov. Foss, of Massachusetts, to confer on the railroad situation which arose from the stopping of the construction of the Grand Trunk's branch line through Boston to Providence.

Up until the last moment before the conference, Gov. Foss held to his decision to bar all newspaper men and representatives of the press association from the conference. It was generally known and admitted that Gov. Foss would suggest a New England railroad commission composed of the chairmen of the six New England State railroad committees to be empowered by the Legislatures of the various States to regulate and control the railroad situation and especially to enforce efficient passenger and freight service.

In a letter to the other five Governors made public today, Gov. Foss declared that New England, because of its isolated geographical location, has been practically ignored by the national legislature in the matter of the regulation of the railroads.

It was pointed out in the letter that the States are at a disadvantage in dealing separately with the railroad situation and that the only solution which will lead to better conditions will be the joint railroad commission, provided the various legislatures agree to give it sufficient power.

COMMISSIONERS. Before going into conference, Gov. Foss, of Rhode Island, informally approved of Gov. Foss' proposition for a joint transportation board representing all the New England states. "I believe this to be the best solution of the New England transportation problem yet offered," said Gov. Foss. "I think it is perfectly feasible. Of course, it is all right to speak against monopoly but this can be carried to a destructive extent."

"I believe thoroughly in adequate regulation and that the only way in which we must have competition in rates for this seems to spur the railroads to develop good service." Gov. Foss said he had not gone sufficiently into the subject of each state appointing certain directors on a joint transportation board through its confines to speak for publication.

"I do not believe in railroad owned 'tray lines,'" he said in discussing that subject.

Prior to the conference, Gov. Foss stated that Gov. Baldwin, of Connecticut, had approved of his plan for a joint railroad board.

BUEL OBECES TO CRITICISM Dislikes Notoriety Attending Announcement of His Marriage

New York, Jan. 25.—Positive and emphatic denial that he had failed to withdraw from the Jesuit Society previous to his marriage to Miss Katherine Grace Powers, daughter of Edward J. Powers, was made today in a letter sent to the United Press by David Hillhouse Buel, one time head of Georgetown University and former Jesuit educator, through F. H. Rogers, of Cambridge, Mass., a classmate of Buel's.

Buel, in his letter, insists that he was in good standing and no charges of any kind had been preferred against him when in July he resigned from the Jesuit Society by serving "proper notice to that effect on the superior of the society."

Buel insists in his letter that the reasons for his resignation were proper and well known to President Gasson of the Boston College, Judge Murray, M. J. Kennedy of Boston, and "the family name of whose members has been connected with that of the writer in the daily press."

"The uncalculated and unnecessary criticism of the writer given to reporters by the Jesuit Gasson of Boston," continued Buel, "and of the Jesuit Duhrie, vice president of Georgetown University, in connection with a departure from the Jesuit methods of secrecy and concealment in such matters as to suggest they have been prompted by some personal reason."

Buel then cites various cases of men who, he says, have withdrawn from the Jesuit Society and either entered other faiths or took up educational work and according to him, were never publicly criticized by the members of the society.

MR. HOWELL TAKES CADILLAC AGENCY. Alexander Howell, well known in automobile circles throughout this section of the state, has accepted the agency for the Cadillac automobile in Bridgeport. New quarters are being arranged on upper Fairfield avenue and are soon expected to be open. Mr. Howell whose former home was in Greenwch, Conn., was for many years in charge of the New York City Police as well as being a former Human agent in the state.

HOODLUMS BLAMED BY STRIKERS FOR STORMING HOTELS

Leaders of Waiters' Union Say They Have Counseled Against All Violence

New York, Jan. 25.—At the headquarters of the waiters' union, today, it was charged that the waiters on strike were not guilty of the bombardment with bricks of the hotel and restaurant windows, but that this violence was the work of gangs of young ruffians who followed the marching waiters around and started the trouble.

"Our men have been counseled against all violence," declared the union leaders. "They would simply have marched around to the different hotels to urge the union waiters at work to come out on strike, had the hoodlums kept away."

The union estimated today that 5,000 men were now out on strike and said 2,000 more would be out before night.
