

Colonel TODDhunter of Missouri
By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS

"Well, if you will have it, Thurs, it's this," replied Colonel Strickland. "I'm up at a tree in the matter of campaign expenses. Old Governor Leslie was sure he could raise a Strickland campaign fund by asking the right men and telling them what he proposed to do with it, they knowing that Steve Yancey ain't fit to be governor of Missouri. But so far he's not with mighty poor success. He told me all about it in St. Louis yesterday. I ain't got a dollar in the world, and we've established headquarters in St. Louis and Kansas City that's got to be kept up. How we're going to do it is what I can't figure out."

The two old friends faced each other silently.

"That certainly is a serious situation," said Colonel Strickland at last.

"It's so solemnly serious, Thurs," returned the other, "that I can't see my way out of it."

But at this Colonel Todhunter snorted. "That's where you're wrong, Bill Strickland," he exclaimed. "I've been in tight places 'n anybody on earth, 'cept'n the fellow who come out of a spree with hot coppers in hand, but I'll be jim swizzled if I ever got into one I couldn't get out of. And we ain't in that kind of a one now. How much money do you need?"

Colonel Strickland shook his head. "There's no good you and me figuring along that line, old fellow. We need at least $3,000, and while it's pretty certain old Leslie will raise that amount eventually that doesn't cut any ice now. We need the money right here at the start."

"And you can't raise it?" asked Colonel Todhunter.

"No, I can't," answered Colonel Strickland. "And I get what a man deserves for thinking he knows how to save the country when he don't even know how to take care of himself."

"That ain't so, Bill," answered Colonel Todhunter. "You ain't got a cent in the world, but think they can't help you from being governor of Missouri simply because you're a poor man has got another think comin', sub. You draw your personal note for $3,000 in my favor. I'll indorse it right here, and if I don't get that money it's because the Nineveh National bank don't know a good thing when it sees it."

"What do you mean, Todhunter?" asked Colonel Strickland, instant protest in his eyes.

"I mean this, Bill Strickland," replied Colonel Todhunter. "In the first place, old Governor Leslie is dead sure to raise that campaign fund. In the second place, all heaven and hell hates a quitter, and you ain't a-goin' to be one. In the third place, the Todhunter farm is as pretty, a piece of collateral for a $3,000 loan as old Shyllock himself would have the heart to ask."

"That's exactly what I thought you were going to say," quietly commented Colonel Strickland. "But it don't go for a minute. I ain't going to tie you up on this proposition."

"Th' ain't nobody goin' to tie me up," said Colonel Todhunter. "And I ain't goin' to tie myself up either. I'm goin' to tie the other fellow up. I'll tie them tricksters in St. Louis that's queerin' old Governor Leslie's game. They're the ones that's puttin' a frost on the Strickland campaign fund. If they can do that successfully they've got you whipped right here and now. But I'm a-goin' to fool 'em."

"No, Thurs, I don't do it," protested Colonel Strickland. "Puttin' up a good fight is one thing, but ruinin' your friends is something entirely different. I haven't fallen that low yet."

"You haven't fallen anywhere," said Colonel Todhunter, "but you've got my fightin' blood up, and by the Lord Harry, if you ain't man enough to fight alongside o' me, I'll fight by myself!"

"Todhunter," said Colonel Strickland, "it's all wrong. You haven't got any call to do a thing like that for me."

"The man that ain't got no call to help a friend that needs help," replied Colonel Todhunter, "ain't got no call to keep on livin'. You set down there and make out that there note."

Reluctantly Colonel Strickland obeyed. But he smiled cynically as he passed the paper to Colonel Todhunter.

"You forget, Thurs," he said, "that old Eph Tucker is president of the Nineveh National bank. He is likely to finance our campaign against Steve Yancey."

Colonel Todhunter laughed. "I ain't forgettin' nothin'," he responded. "And don't you forget that old Eph Tucker was a note shaver long before he was a politician, and he's got note shavin' in his blood bigger'n a mule. He couldn't no more let a good piece of paper get away from his bank than he could fly, and angels'll have to be mighty scarce before old Eph Tucker sees any flyin'."

Nevertheless when Colonel Todhunter presented the Strickland note, indorsed by him and with his unnumbered farm as collateral, for discount he found old Eph Tucker solicitously inquisitive.

"What's it all about, Colonel Todhunter?" the banker asked. "You and Bill Strickland going in together on some business deal? What's the consideration for the note?"

Colonel Todhunter looked old Tucker square in the eyes. "Eph," he replied, "I'm goin' to play my cards face up on the table. Bill Strickland needs money to pay his campaign expenses. That's why I'm indorsin' his note and askin' this bank to discount it." Old Tucker's little eyes narrowed. "And you're gettin' no good out of it yourself?" he asked, studying Colonel Todhunter curiously. "You're lending

"We'll discount the note. It's your funeral, not ours."

your credit and riskin' your farm just to help Bill Strickland along in politics."

"That's what I'm doin', Eph," replied Colonel Todhunter.

"Then," said the banker, "you're a bigger fool than I took you for. Bill Strickland ain't good for $100 with this bank."

"He's good for any amount with me, Eph," returned Colonel Todhunter, a sudden menace in his tone. "But that ain't the question. Is this note good as it stands now?"

"Bill Strickland don't stand no more show for the nomination than a rabbit," spoke old Tucker. "He'll never get his hands on the governor's salary, if that's what you're countin' on, Colonel Todhunter."

"Eph," said Colonel Todhunter, "I'll look out for that end of the business. All I want you to do is pass on this here note."

"Colonel Todhunter," replied the banker, "the indorsement and the collateral make this note good, and it's a banker's business to buy good paper. We'll discount the note. It's your funeral, not ours."

"That finishes the business then," said Colonel Todhunter. "I ain't worryin' about any funerals. But if you're a-countin' on either Bill Strickland or me furnishin' the corpse, Eph, you're goin' to see one of the liveliest corpses you ever seen in all your born days, sub."

The old banker made no reply.

Colonel Todhunter was chuckling when he reported to Colonel Strickland. "It's all right, Bill, and you can get back to St. Louis right away," he said. "I got the money from old Eph Tucker. But great Scott and Maria, it was worse'n pullin' eyesethel! All the same we got it, and now we'll proceed to lick old Eph with his own money."

Colonel Strickland would not have spoken so confidently if he had heard the glowing speech of President Tucker of the Nineveh National bank a moment or two after his own departure from that institution.

"The two helpless fools!" muttered old Eph Tucker to himself. "I've got 'em both where I want 'em now. We'll ruin Bill Strickland for good and all this time. We'll wipe him off the political map of Missouri. And as for old Thurston Todhunter, I'll make such a lame duck out of him yet that the only Todhunter who can ever live on that farm of his again will have to marry a Tucker to do it—like I'll make Mary Todhunter marry my son Sam before I'm through with her."

CHAPTER VII.
Colonel Todhunter Cuts a Wide Swath in Missouri's Metropolis.

TODDhunter, a countryman born and bred and of an innate rusticity of soul that was an essential part of his being, contact with the throbbing life of a big city was so rare and foreign picturesque unlikeness to the urban type. He stalked into the busy St. Louis headquarters of the parlor floor of the Luskley hotel, the living embodiment of that political figure dear to the amused metropolitan imagination, the delegate from the rural districts.

It was a brave and honest face that showed itself in Colonel Bill Strickland's private office, but somewhat dimmed at thought of an impending ordeal.

"I'll just be eternally whipsawed if you ain't a-tryin' to make a round peg fit into a square hole, Bill!" he protested earnestly, something like awe of his surroundings stamped upon his sun-burned features. "I'm willin' to do most anything in the world for you, and you know it. But when you turn me loose in a big town like this and expect me to behave like anythin' more'n a wall eyed plow horse with his tail full o' cockleburrs I'll be everlastin'ly condemn'd if you ain't makin' a mighty serious mistake, sub!"

"Nonsense, Thurs!" laughed Colonel Strickland. "I'm counting on you for some St. Louis speeches that'll be worth their weight in gold, my friend. We need you here, sir—a man that talks old fashioned American Democracy straight from the shoulder. City politicians have forgotten what the real Democratic doctrine is, Thurs, and we've got to revive it in the people's hearts if we expect 'em to vote right. That's why I want you to help me open my St. Louis campaign. You've got to do it, Thurs!"

Colonel Todhunter gazed at his friend pensively. "Bill," he said, "I'm a-goin' to do it, as you well know. I'd strip the shirt off'n my back and head a percussion warvin' for a Strickland banner if you asked me to, whether I thought it was the best thing to do in the circumstances or not. But I bid you remember, Bill, that I warned you in time. It'll be your fault if you have occasion to regret havin' brought me in from the pasture and stacked me up against these here bang tailed city thoroughbreds, sub!"

"I'll take the chances, old fellow," said the candidate, his eyes twinkling. "You must oblige me now for old friendship's sake and I'll be responsible for everything that happens afterward. I ain't the least bit afraid."

"I'll eat my hat if I don't wish I could say the same, sub!" ejaculated Colonel Todhunter, a vehement panic in his tone. "I'm skeered of the man now, sub, because I'm out of my ball-wick and up against a proposition that I don't know any more about 'n a hog knows about a holiday, sub. And you're a-goin' to discover, sub, before we get through with this piece of foolishness that I had mighty good reasons for bein' skeered too."

"Shucks, you old warhorse!" laughed Colonel Bill Strickland. "Once you get into the fight you'll warm up like a two-year-old and show these St. Louis folks what a real Missouri Democrat is. You're going to make the hit of your life, sir!"

"Maybe I am and maybe I ain't," Bill Strickland, quoth Colonel Todhunter moodily. "But all I ask at the final is that you'll remember it wasn't me that made the prediction, sub. I'm a natural born optimist, sub, but that don't necessarily mean that I'm a natural born jackass at all times and under all circumstances and on all subjects, as some folks seem to think, sub!"

And in this frame of mind Colonel Todhunter returned into the general headquarters office and was introduced to his Nineveh friend's St. Louis backers and campaign staff.

A quiet young newspaper man who happened to be drifting through the rooms seemed instantly impressed by Colonel Todhunter's picturesque personality. He studied the colonel intently, a growing appreciation in his thoughtful and latently humorous eyes.

After exchanging a few words with this new addition to the Strickland forces the journalist went into one of the private telephone booths and called on the reception room and called up his paper. Then he came back to Colonel Todhunter, engaging him in conversation. A few minutes later a second man casually appeared and unobtrusively stationed himself where he had a good front view of the colonel, who was being deftly led into political discussion by his new acquaintance.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD
Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for her child. Of course nearly all modern day women nowadays have medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain bearing for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

THE PLAZA

(By the Plaza Press Agent.)
An entire new bill is offered today and for the remainder of the week at the popular Plaza Theatre. My, but won't the young folks enjoy the program. Our old Bridgeport friend, Sagar Midgley, and his company offer that execrably funny farcical sketch entitled "Early Morning Reflections". The fun is fast and furious during this sure cure for the blues. It comes direct from Hammerstein's

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample means in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once children were born there were now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ENTERTAINMENTS AND THEATRICAL GOSSIP

POLI'S — VAUDEVILLE

(By the Poli Press Agent.)
Prince Floro, who used to be the grand high lord of monkeydom but who is now showing the theatregoing public how well a chimpanzee may educate himself, is delighting bits audiences daily at Poli's. This wonderful simian is mentally developed almost beyond belief. He acts with human instinct and intelligence that is amazing and performs many feats that are as entertaining as they are almost unbelievable.

The price can play billiards, order a dinner with all sorts of "fixings," tip the waiter and do many other man things. He is an athlete of ability and a routine course of callisthenics is part of his daily life. His bicycle riding is a big feature of his athletic training and daily he rides half a dozen makes and sizes of bicycles. And he rides them with the abandon and ease of a professional "bikist." Bridgeport theatregoers should not fail to see Prince Floro.

Other big features of this week's bill: Wilbur Mack and Nella Walker, musical comedy favorites, in a delightful little skit, "Their New Philation"; George Roland and company in Billy Burke's rip-roaring farce, "Fixing the Furnace"; the Frey Twins, in athletic posing and wrestling exhibitions; Du Callon, a chattering Englishman atop a tottering ladder; Billy "Swede" Hall and company in a clever sketch "Made Good"; Hilda Hawthorne, singing ventriloquist comedienne; Davis and Walker, dancers extraordinary; and the Polissope, with the latest and best motion pictures.

The big audiences that have seen this exceptional bill are loud in their praise of the bill. Without any support please Bridgeport's theatregoing public. Seats for the remaining performances may be reserved by phoning 2910.

PARK THEATRE

(By the Park Press Agent.)
"GIRLS FROM HAPPYLAND."
Billy W. Watson and "Girls From Happyland" should create more than an ordinary sensation when presenting the Flying Dutchman, a two act musical mix-up at the Park Theatre the last 3 days of this week.

The new vehicle with which Watson intends to increase his popularity has been selected to absolutely fit the characteristics of this clever comedian. This means more than to simply write a clever humor. Watson has peculiarities, original and some quaint that will add to the magnitude of the entertainment. All in all, it is a typical Joe Hurlst show, a show that stands out like all the others emanating from the master hand of this young and fertile producer.

The supporting cast is equal to the best. Twenty-four enchanting young women grace the chorus. They will be seen in many fascinating changes of costume. Scenery and electrical displays will meet with the admiration of the auditors.

"THE LITTLE MILLIONAIRE."
At the Park Theatre next Monday night, Cohan and Harris will present Geo. M. Cohan's musical farce "The Little Millionaire." When it comes to building a play with structural and literary value of the play solely it would have to be considered an enormous success. The musical elements, the great many melodious ditties and other novel interpolations will add to the magnitude of the entertainment. All in all, it is a typical Joe Hurlst show, a show that stands out like all the others emanating from the master hand of this young and fertile producer.

Give prompt relief from BACKACHE, KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLE, RHEUMATISM, CONGESTION OF THE KIDNEYS, INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER and all annoying URINARY IRREGULARITIES. A positive boon to MIDDLE AGED and ELDERLY PEOPLE and for WOMEN.

HAVE HIGHEST RECOMMENDATION
S. A. Davis, 621 Washington St., Connorsville, Ind., is in his 58th year. He writes: "I have suffered much from my kidneys and bladder. I had severe backache and my kidney action was very weak. I was unable to sleep at night, and in my bladder there was constant pain. I took Foley Kidney Pills for some time and now I feel better and my kidney action is normal. Foley Kidney Pills have a great recommendation."

F. B. BRILL,
Stratford Ave. and Sixth St.

In New York where it created a considerable amount of comment. As an added attraction Watson and Flynn will more than make good. It was only by special efforts that the Plaza booking staff were able to engage this clever team for the balance of this week. These two comedians were the hit of every bill where they have appeared this season. Bridgeport will surely receive them favorably. Another bright comedy pair of renowned are Kittner and McClay, whose act consists of a lively stepping act, songs teeming with up-to-date news.

Lovers of circus work out of the ordinary will find an act to their special liking in the Emilie Sisters. They are two young and clever girls whose work in the air has been the feature of the largest tented shows in the country and were only persuaded to enter the vaudeville field by the gleam of the princely salaries paid. Another act of a sensational character are The Three Romans, whose work on the tottering ladders is simply marvelous. Without any support they pose and do other dextrous tricks on the extreme top of the frail structures. The Sylphanos in a musical act will display their skill to great advantage. The latest "day light" photo plays will add divertisement to this popular vaudeville bill.
