MANY HEARINGS Sorrowing Throng At Obsequies Of Any, Eugene B. Peck

Many Important Measures Still to Be Disposed of As Session Nears Close

Hartford, April 29.—Many and complex were the subjects taken up for hearings by legislative committees, this afternoon. A productivity tax on the oyster industry, more men in train crews on the New Haven road, a tuition fee for pupils in high and trade schools, the acquisition of the old railroad bridge at New London for highway purposes and the resolutions concerning the judgeships in the two Norwalks were some of the pressing matters before the committees.

The session of the general assembly draws to a close but the most important bills remain to be disposed of. The leaders in both branches will make an effort to induce the members to sit longer each day and to hold a Friday session. The Senate will take definite action at once. The evening session is preferred to sitting on Fridays.

The shellfishery hearing before Senator Shanley's committee draws attention at this late day to the bills relating to this industry. The productivity tax is along the lines of a suggestion made by Tax Commissioner Corbin, last session. It is vigorously opposed now as then by the growers. Their argument is that the industry is fading away owing to increasingly bad conditions in the Sound from pollution of inland and tidal waters. Fred L. Perry, clerk of the shellfish commission, director of the bill and the oyster growers have taken a hand in the agitation which is centered on the bill to abolish the commission as it is now constituted. At the hearing, last week, on pollution, the statement was made that the industry is paralyzed along the shore.

Hearing on the New London bridge matter is in the hall of the House before the roads, rivers and bridges committee. A large delegation from New London was on hand as the taking of this bridge means much to the city. The proposition is to make the bridge a part of the highway route for automobiles along the Sound shore. It has been previously stated that President Miller was willing to transfer this bridge to the State under certain conditions. Engineers have figured that the building of a new approach will not be either an extremely expensive task or a difficult one as the routing the road through the city will entirely change conditions which exist there now.

The publicity given at first hearing on the tuition bill is expected to develop the opposition to the plan favored by the State Board of Education to have the schooling of pupils sent to the high and trade schools nominally paid for by parents. The board is advocating the establishment of vocational schools to which the large percentage of children graduating from grammar schools will go making the high and trade schools really fitting schools for colleges and scientific schools. In the opinion of the state board members, high school courses will be in the nature of special instruction for a selected few.

As soon as the Senate has the time the report to the committee which investigated the alleged Hurley bribery case will be called up by Senator Isbell. With it will come the resolution put in by Senator McNelis, expanding the senate's confidence in Senator Hurley. A vigorous debate is anticipated.

The full crew bill before the railroad committee brought the members interested in the measure. The attorneys for them had added weight to their arguments by citing that the full crew bills had become laws in New York and New Jersey.

Men prominent in legal and fraternal circles, men who have attained success in the business life of Bridgeport, and men in fact from every walk of public life, gathered at the home of Eugene B. Peck, 415 Clinton avenue, this afternoon, to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased attorney, who died at the Bridgeport hospital Sunday after an operation which had been performed as a last resort in an endeavor to save his life and restore him to health.

The funeral this afternoon was one of the largest held here in some time. Hundreds of people called at the late home to look for the last time on the face of the deceased before the body was taken to its final resting place in Mountain Grove cemetery.

There was a wealth of floral tributes, the different including a beautiful standing wreath of pink roses and wax leaves from the Royal Arcanum; a handsome standing piece of carnations and roses from the Ladies' Commandery; a large standing piece some five or six feet in height of carnations and sweet peas, from the police department in which Attorney Peck was a member; a standing piece from Joseph Dowdall lodge, K. of P.; the Brooklawn Club, the Algonquin Club, Lafayette Consistory, A. S. R. of Arcanum lodge, Bridgeport Lodge, B. P. O. E., and scores of relatives, business associates and friends.

There were delegations present from all the different fraternal organizations of which Mr. Peck was a member. Members of the Fairfield County Bar Association, and many prominent public officials of the city.

The pall bearers were Bernard Setzer, John Fisher, Gladden Beers, August Englehard, Charles D. Davis, E. R. Ellis, Charles M. Gerdenier and A. M. Wootter.

Rev. W. H. Lewis of St. John's Episcopal church delivered a touching eulogy over the body of the deceased, dwelling on the qualities of the man which had made him a success in life, and gained for him the esteem and honor of all his associates in legal, business and political life. The south choir, which consisted in the funeral service, singing "Crossing the Bar."

The Knights Templar burial service was carried out at the grave in Mountain Grove cemetery where the body was laid in the earth shortly after 3 o'clock.

The Weather—Fair, cooler, tonight and tomorrow.

Suit news of vital import.

The woman who would share in the best suit opportunity of many a day will do well to be here at 8 o'clock Wednesday. She can then buy a suit of newest style and worth $25 or more at $18

It is but rarely the store can print such news as this. When it does, wise women will be very prompt to act. From a tailor whose suits the store is glad to sell at regular price and in full knowledge they are splendid value, we have bought a lot of suits that are to be sold at far less than regular prices.

They are suits of newest and most-attractive style. They are suits of splendid material such as fine serge, and bengaline, and bedford cord, and effective mixtures. They are suits that are both handsome in style and handsome in the way they are made. Tailoring upon them is both thorough and notably good.

Among them are shades of blue that are very attractive. There are many grays ranging from dark to light. There are tan hues that will win favor in an instant. And there are some unique and appealing mixtures.

There is wide range of style. One may choose as plain a suit or as elaborate as one's fancy dictates. And always there is a real and delightful saving to be made.

Great majority of these suits would sell usually at $25 $27.50 or $30. There are a few that would sell for $32.50 and $35. And there are even three or four that are regular $40 suits. My how they will be snapped up!

And the entire lot, in sizes from 34 to 40 may be chosen from at— $18

Second floor.

Umbrella that won't poke through.

Ninety-five umbrellas of every hundred (that are not stolen) are lost to the owner because they poke through at the top. This is because of the way they are made.

Practically all umbrellas are made with tiny hole at upper end of the rib. Through this hole is run a wire which holds the ribs together at top of the umbrella. But the wire rusts and finally breaks—and then rib poke a hole through the fabric and the umbrella is useless.

Here is a different umbrella: Lycoming Wireless.

It is made with a little ball and socket fastening in place of the hole and wire. That fastening cannot slip because it is held in place by a solid ring. And a Lycoming umbrella just can't break at the top. This arrangement also prevents the ribs from getting crossed and tangling when one tries to put up an umbrella. Because of this device, a Lycoming umbrella will long outlast a usual sort. Because of it, the makers guarantee the Lycoming umbrella—and the store will replace with a new one any that breaks at the top and pokes a hole through the cover.

Lycoming umbrellas cost no more than other sorts of equal quality. And, counting their durability, they actually cost much less.

With different grades of covering, mounted with attractive handles, sizes for men and for women,—

90c to $5

*Main floor, near elevators.

There's news that one can't exaggerate.

Even if a man wanted to he could not exaggerate some news. Its very bigness makes the battle of Gettysburg? or the siege of Scutari and the heroism of the Montenegrins? It simply is not possible.

This news of the store's special lot of men's suits is of that very sort. It is too big to exaggerate. At a time when many merchants find it hard to get clothing at regular price, the store was able to get it at special price. And it passes that clothing along to Bridgeport men at a saving. That is what the store is for. If it could only do what usual stores do, it wouldn't be of half as much value to men.

Suits from Kuppenheimer. Suits of the fabrics that are most liked this season including blue serges. Suits in the right styles of this season. And suits that are worth $25 $30 and even $35 according to the usual scale of prices.

Each one, all ready for a man to slip on, at $20

Main floor, rear; special entrance from Cannon St.
