Fifteen Years of Dental Experience

THE ANALGESIC DENTIST

FIRST TO DO REAL PAINLESS DENTISTRY

The NEW ANALGESIC METHOD—the first postively painless dentistry—is practiced by me. At intervals during the dental operation, the patient takes a breath or two of ANALGO and is insensible to pain. No other sense is affected—no other function disturbed—the patient simply CAN NOT FEEL PAIN but he CAN HEAR AND SEE AND UNDERSTAND all that is going on about him. In this state (known as analgesia) the best dental work can be accomplished because the dentist does his work unhindered by the customary twisting and jerking caused by pain and fear of the old-fashioned methods.

Yes, I can extract your teeth, put in crowns and bridges, do any dental work WITHOUT PAIN TO YOU—and best of all I do this at FAIR PRICES.

OVER-STUDY CAUSES BREAK DOWN OF STAPLES HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT

(Special to the Farmer.)
Westport, June 20.—A nervous breakdown, the result of over-study is the cause of the illness of Stanley Taylor, a student in the second year class of the Staples High School. Just before the first session Wednesday morning fellow classmates of young Taylor noticed the young man tighten his grip on his desk and almost fall to the floor. The class room was thrown into confusion when the youth was seen to be helpless. He was carried into the open and a physician sent for. Later he was taken to the Norwegian hospital under the care of Dr. Baldwin of Norway. His physicians describe his illness as an attack of apoplexy induced by the overworking of the brain.

Taylor was the honor man of his class and was known among his classmates as a "grind." He was also intensely popular among his class members.

To-day it was stated that the young man had recovered from his attack and was still in a nervous condition. His physicians have advised that he discontinue school for the remainder of the season and seek rest from all school work.

The Staples High School baseball team has closed its season with nine victories out of eleven games, a net percentage of .818. The team has a batting average of .400. The contests of the team include:

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. S. Putney are in New London to-day attending the Yale-Harvard boat race.

The Boy Scouts are not the only ones in town who are to go into camp during the summer. The Girls' Friendly Society of Christ church met recently and formed the Camp Fire Girls' Club. Mrs. R. D. S. Putney was appointed chief guardian and the Misses Ida Foote, Edith Tovey and Louise Sherwood were named assistant guardians. The Boy Scouts will spend two weeks at Long Island. When they break camp the girls will start in. They will be under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. S. Putney.

Work was started yesterday by the Warren Bros. Co., who have the contract for the laying of the permanent pavement on the state road. Work was started on the Southport side of the Mill River bridge, where it was abandoned last autumn. The work will be continued daily, it being but a matter of a short time before the workmen will invade Westport.

There will be a tea and dance at the Westport country club on Saturday. Starting to-morrow the employees of the Charles H. Kemper leather factory will have their usual Saturday half holiday continuing for the remainder of the summer season.

It is reported that deer have been seen in this vicinity during the past few days. Wednesday it was reported that two deer were noted near the Congregational church, while Monday yesterday a deer was seen in the Cross Roads district.

A son was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buckingham of Compo street.

The Five Hundred club has disbanded for the summer season, but will resume meetings again in September. The club formed during the past winter has enjoyed many social evenings at the homes of its members.

A new concrete walk has been placed in front of the Salmon store in State street. New curbs have also been placed at this point continuing to the right for the rest of the block.

50 Per Cent. of the World's Business Done on Credit.

Way back in ancient history, ever since people first bought and sold goods, credit has been in evidence. In fact, it is the economic way of life. Large business and small use it, for it is the economic way of conducting any enterprise. Why, therefore, should the private individual endeavor to purchase their household necessities, clothes, etc., in any other manner? Yet hundreds do, handicapping themselves, denying themselves all because they will not conduct their own business the way big business does. Cheerful Credit as devised by Caesar Misch, Inc., is used to give everyone the advantage of purchasing the best for the least and enabling all to take advantage of it, by dividing the payments of the purchase price up into small amounts that no hardship is felt by meeting them. It places within the reach of all the world's best merchandise, it places a better grade of goods before many who otherwise it was necessary to pay cash could not afford them. It is a difficult matter to obtain Cheerful Credit, for it is freely extended to all who are in receipt of incomes, no matter how meagre.

THE BRILLIANT STARS OF JUNE.

By the end of June, Mars, Venus, Saturn and Jupiter will all be morning stars, but Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is at all times the "Star" medicine for coughs, croup and whooping cough. A cold in June is apt to develop into bronchitis or pneumonia as at any other time, but not if Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is taken. F. B. Brill, Stratford avenue and Sixth street—Adv. 1135

SCRAP BOOK FOR TO-DAY

Two years from yesterday, June 13, 1915, the centenary of the battle of Waterloo will be fittingly commemorated. England and Germany will take a prominent part in the program arranged by the influential Belgian committee in charge of the arrangements. The object of the committee is not so much to glorify the great victory won by Wellington and Blücher over "the Man of Destiny" as it is to mark the progress of the peace which took part in that terrible and decisive conflict, French and Belgian as well as English and German. The celebration commemorates not only a great victory over the French, but also the rounding out of a hundred years of peace between Great Britain and France, and this fact will not be lost sight of.

A magnificent monument will be erected at Waterloo and will be dedicated two years hence, as a feature of the centenary celebration. This memorial will take the form of a hyposium, under which will lie the remains of the soldiers who died in the field of battle. The base will be decorated with figures representing grief, heroism and hope. The inscriptions will be in English, French, German and Dutch. The monument will also include statues of Wellington, Blücher, Napoleon and the Prince of Orange.

One of the first actions of the celebration committee was to collect all the human bones which were even yet to be found in the large numbers around the field of conflict. These are to be placed in one vast tomb beneath the monument. At Quatre-Bras will be erected another monument to those who fell in the battle of June 18, 1815. Walter Scott, "died bravely for a cause foreign to him."

The field of Waterloo, as it appears to-day, is thus described by a correspondent:

"The scene is peaceful, pastoral, and at first sight it is difficult to believe that this was the ground on which was fought one of the bloodiest battles recorded in all history. Yet in the ferns and in the orchard adjoining one still finds many grisly relics of war. Pieces of cartridges are strewn about. There are also bits of leather, once parts of caps, many with the initials of the owner, and to some of these decaying fragments the remains of human heads are attached. In the old orchard are decaying stumps of trees with balls through them. In the ferns and in the orchard adjoining many of the gravestones hardly covered, save by flowered twigs that hang beautifully over the relics of carnage and the signs of tumult. A narrow rural footpath winds among the graves, a blest oasis of gentleness and peace of nature, through these horrid monuments of man's fury."

The cunning of the "heaven Chinese" was never better illustrated than by the escape of the murderer of Elsie Sigel. It was four years ago yesterday that the young and beautiful granddaughter of Gen. Franz Sigel, the civil war hero, was found murdered in New York City. The young man who had been engaged in missionary work among the Orientals, Leon Ling was suspected of the crime, and a world-wide search, in which the police of many countries were engaged, commenced. For four years the quest has continued, but Leon Ling remains at liberty, laughing in his sleeve, perhaps, at the clumsy efforts of the police to catch him. Last week he was captured. The crime was peculiarly atrocious, and the white world demanded the punishment of the murderer. That the police have been baffled, as they have so often been, in such cases, is a tribute to the superior cunning of the yellow man.

Married, twenty-seven years ago to-day, at Cintrast, Miss Helen E. Herron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Herron, and William Howard Taft, son of Judge Alphonso Taft.

"The bride wore a charming gown of white silk, and she carried a bouquet of sweet peas and lilies of the valley." Other details of the happy occasion, of which the bride's mother and father-to-day by ex-President and Mrs. Taft, include the item that "the ceremony was performed by Rev. M. A. Hoce, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Zanesville, O., who married the bride's mother and father, and the statement that "the bride groom left immediately after the reception for New York, whence they will sail for England."

Newspaper reports, out of the kindness of their hearts, always picture a bride as a reigning belle and the bridegroom as little, if any, short of a genius, while the families of both come in for much flattering comment. It was formerly the pleasant custom of society reporters to indulge in predictions as to the glorious future of the happy pair. A journalistic prophet of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette in writing of the Taft wedding, had this to say:

"William H. Taft is one of the young men of the city who may be depended upon in public affairs. He is one of the highest standing of the graduates of Yale, and his original powers, perfect integrity and courage and correct instincts, as well as thorough information, have made him useful, won for him the friendships and enmities most complimentary, and opened for him a career that has the highest promise of great distinction."

"Betting is an ineradicable foible of human nature. This day witnessed Earl of Durham, who, being fifty-eight years old to-day, and, from his youth, a patron of 'the sport of kings,' speaks as an authority. Lord Durham, who is distinguished by the fact that he is not a crone, yet admits that it is not a virtue.

"It is usually an unheeded excitement and an expensive amusement," says the Earl, who is steward of the Jockey Club and one of the most prominent of race horse owners on the British turf. "It is very seldom, I think, a real enjoyment to those who indulge in it. Legislation cannot stamp out this universal human passion, but it need not foster it."

Lord Durham has lately led in a movement to abolish tipsters' advertisements in the English newspapers, and to that end fathered a bill in the House of Lords.

Whether or not the betting instinct is, as Lord Durham says, an "ineradicable foible," it has manifested itself in all ages and among all peoples. In ancient England the loser of a wager was often made a slave to the winner, and sold in traffic, like other merchandise.

The philosophic Wu Ting-Fang once refused an invitation to visit a race course, saying, "It is well known to me that one horse can run faster than another. I do not need an ocular demonstration." That indifference is now shared by Mr. Wu's countrymen, however, as the Chinese are the most inveterate of gamblers.

The first meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was held in 1859, and the society was chartered the following year. The Spring meeting of this organization will be held in Leipzig, as a part of a German tour beginning to-day. The first engineering organization of general scope in America was the American Society of Civil Engineers, founded in 1852. The world's first engineering society was the Society of Civil Engineers, formed in England by Smeaton and others in 1793. The English Institution of Civil Engineers was established in 1818. The first organization of mechanical engineers was effected in England in 1847. The American Institute of Electrical Engineers was founded in 1884, was the first important organization of its kind. Engineering as a science had its beginnings about the middle of the eighteenth century, and was first applied to the ocean by the English, in the character of the British Institution of Civil Engineers, "Engineering is the art of controlling the great powers of nature for the use and convenience of man."

West Virginia will celebrate its fifty-fifth birthday to-day. It was just half a century ago, on June 20, 1858, that from secession of the people of the western part of the Old Dominion culminated in the inauguration of a new State government at Wheeling, and the addition of a new territory to the flag of the Union. Wheeling, the first capital, will be the scene of the birthday celebration to-day. The "stogie city" will be the host to many distinguished men, and oratory and fervent cheering will flow freely at the great state banquet, while the populace will be entertained by parades, pageants and concerts.

The "secession from secession" movement, the alliance of the West Virginia mountaineers with the Union cause, and the admission of West Virginia to statehood, had a profound effect on the fortunes of the Confederacy, preventing the success of the plan for a northward invasion to Lake Erie, thus dismembering the North by separating the East from the West. Eastern and Western Virginia were at war with each other, in spirit, long before the outbreak of the civil strife between North and South. Eastern Virginia was settled largely by Englishmen to the flag, the higher class, conservative in politics, and adherents of the Church of England. Western Virginia attracted sturdy pioneers of many nationalities, and was more radical in political tendencies, and non-conformist in religion. The civil war only served to bring these differences to a crisis.

Twenty-two years ago today a provisional State government was formed in West Virginia, and application was made for admission to the Union. Exactly two years later the new State was admitted to the Union at Wheeling. It was a day of great jubilation in the little city on the Ohio. Flags flaunted everywhere, and vast crowds gathered to cheer the outgoing provisional Governor, Pierpont, and the new Governor, Arthur I. Boreman, a Scotch-Irishman, who was formally inaugurated. This was the Mountain State attacking on its career as the thirty-fifth in the Union, with the motto, "Montani Semper Liberi"—"Mountaineers are always free."

Fifty years after that auspicious event, the state still smolders in parts of West Virginia. Paint Creek, Beaver Creek, New River—these names are associated with recent battles almost as prominently as some of the conflicts of fifty years ago. For several years, with only an occasional truce, capital and labor have been at war in the Kanawha county coal fields. Martial law, the "bull-pen," dynamite, military courts, the suppression of newspapers, the spectacle of civilians being driven through muddy streets of dingy towns by khaki-clad soldiers, Gatling guns frowning from exterminated forts, churches transformed into prisons, armed miners lurking in ambush to "pop" a "scab," armed strikers attacking on the defenses of women and children subsisting on the crusts of poverty—these are features of the problem that West Virginia will seek to forget today.

"Montani Semper Liberi," say the miners, contending for "the right to organize."

"Montani Semper Liberi" respond the mine-owners, asserting their right to conduct their business in their own way.

EDUCATION NOTES

With its newly established bureau of mines, the University of Arizona hopes to aid materially in the development of mining and other industries of the State.

Using the library as a social center, with study clubs and other activities, including a gymnasium, is the method taken by Homestead, Pa., to demonstrate that a library need not be merely a "mausoleum of books."

The distinction of having the best paid one-room country school teacher in the United States is claimed by Logan County, Ill., which pays its teacher $110 per month for a term of nine months.

Through its extension division the University of Kansas will give courses of lectures for elementary school children in 41 American cities, in 200 English, 150 German, and 1,200 French communities, according to C. F. Langworthy, chief of nutrition investigations, at Washington.

Thanks to the wide-awake leadership of men and women, especially women, interested in the schools, a number of Southern communities are making a winning fight against illiteracy. Wilkes County, N. C., for instance, reports, together with other notable indications of school's purpose, that the fact that illiteracy decreased from 13 per cent. in 1900 to 2 per cent. in 1912.

In the belief that rich ballad material still lies hidden in Virginia and other sections of the South, Prof. C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of Virginia, is hunting down all possible versions of old English ballads. The Government has appointed Professor Smith a collaborator of the Bureau of Education in order to give national aid to the work.
