

GODA GONE WITH LULU HACKETT AND HIS SUNDAY CLOTHES

"Don't expect me home until late. I'm going to play baseball in Seymour today," said Steve Goda to his mother as he left his home in Casey's Court near Green street early Sunday morning. Steve when he left the house, carried a new dress suit case which he told his mother contained his baseball suit.

Eagles' Receive Glorious Welcome

Justice and Equality. All were tastefully decorated with flags, bunting and flowers. On the float representing Liberty was a young woman attired as the Goddess of Liberty.

"Justice" was represented by a young woman blindfolded and seated before the scales. Several other young women in Grecian costumes were her aides. "Equality" was personified by two members of Bridgeport aerie, one as a capitalist the other as a workman and both seated facing each other.

One of the handsomest floats in the parade was that of Norwalk aerie. It was fashioned on an automobile and represented Liberty. The running gear of the car were almost hidden in flowers, roses and carnations of red, white and blue being used profusely.

Waterbury aerie also had a handsome automobile float. It was decorated with flags and bunting and a profusion of red poppies and green leaves. Several members of Waterbury aerie with their ladies rode in the float.

One of the most elaborate floats in the procession was that representing the Royal Order of Moose, 253, which was drawn by six black steeds, curbed by members of the degree team dressed in a dark purple livery surmounted by helmets of the Norseman type. The float itself represented the deep water of a lake upon which the antlers and neck of a huge moose appeared.

Closely followed behind were three Indian maidens in a canoe, the exhibit closed by the foot guard of the Moose attired as were those of the degree team ahead.

Mill End dollars do splendid work.

Every dollar that one spends in the Mill End sale does far more work than it could usually: buys more merchandise.

A Mill End dollar has the purchasing power of anywhere from $1.25 up. Some of them actually do more than double duty; buy more than $2 in merchandise.

Here are more illustrations of what one may buy in the Mill End sale—examples of the reasonable and demanded merchandise with which the sale abounds.

It pays to buy such merchandise. It pays to spend money in the Mill End sale. And it will pay to spend it NOW!

WALL STREET TODAY

At 10:45 a. m. stocks opened briskly and with general gains following the London market, where Americans showed fractional advances. Early features in strength included Missouri Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio and several specialties, some of the leaders recording no change. Re-action soon set in, however, and rains were steadily cancelled, while active issues were mostly under yesterday's close. Especial weakness was shown by New Haven convertible six percent bonds, which fell from 104 to 102 1/2. United States Government 5's and Panama's 7's fell to 104 1/2 and 104 1/2, respectively.

Noon.—Stocks were inclined to react, after an opening that promised a continuance of the recent advance. London sent over a higher level of prices, but quotations from that center were accepted with reservation. Of the local leaders, Canadian Pacific alone manifested some strength, while Union Pacific, Reading and Amalgamated yielding under pressure. New low records were made by Wells Fargo and California petroleum common and preferred. The weakest issues were the New Haven six per cent convertibles and stock, the former declining almost four points, with more than 2 points in the latter. United States Government 5's and Panama's 7's fell to 104 1/2 and 104 1/2, respectively. Bonds, particularly government issues, were heavy.

PICKPOCKET CAUGHT—HAD EAGLES' WALLET

South Norwalk, July 22.—A man giving his name as John Parker of Albany, was arrested on the depot platform this morning, charged with picking pockets of the Eagles and their friends going to Bridgeport for the field day exercises. William J. Powell, former head of the Eagles here, saw the man with a pocket book in his hand and the fellow dropped it and tried to get away but was caught. Three other people reported that their watches had been stolen but as none were found on Parker it is presumed he had a pal here.

WO'NT LET 'EM AT COL. MULHALL

Washington, July 22—Senator Reed of the Lobby Probe committee today declared himself against allowing counsel for the N. A. M. to cross examine Martin M. Mulhall, the star witness. Reed said he favored the submission of such questions as the N. A. M. wished to ask, first to the committee, and if the committee then saw fit, to allow the committee itself to address such questions to the witnesses.

The particular phase of Mulhall's testimony on which cross examinations was desired was his declaration that former Representative James E. Watson of Indiana was paid a $500 retainer and $250 weekly salary to work for a tariff commission bill.

NEW TOWN

Newtown, July 22.—Earl L. and Charles M. Johnson of Palmsville, O., who are in town spending their vacation with the families of their uncle, Selectman W. C. Johnson and C. B. Johnson, are spending this week in camp. Miss Edith M. Peck is entertaining several out-of-town guests, and drove Monday to her father's home with her friends. Mrs. S. B. Camp of Taunton has recovered well from an indisposition of the past three weeks, and is now enjoying social visits from her friends. Attorney E. O. Hull of Bridgeport had a narrow experience with the uncertain "buzz wagon" yesterday at Sandy Hook, which he will not soon forget. It happened this way. He motored that day from Bridgeport to Newtown with his daughter who is about to take a vacation, and expected to join some friends on the afternoon train north from the local station. He delivered his charge, and then, as is customary with so many motorists made the spin to Sandy Hook to make the turn at Post Office square without stopping, the test of efficiency in handling a car among all our car owners. Miscalculating the distance or unacquainted with its difficulties, he went too far towards the post office to make the turn, and was compelled to go to the east of sign-post up the abrupt Gas street rise before turning the circle. Here something happened in again reaching roadway to the bridge. The car struck the bridge railing with terrific force, wedging the forward wheels so that the rear truck lost its momentum in sideways lurch and rebound, but not rising upward, which would have thrown him over the bridge to the rocks below. Mr. Hull was unhurt, but it was a very narrow escape and the villagers looking on were in suspense for a few terrible moments. The car was brought to the Walker garage and its owner returned the same night with his car again in commission.

SHOTS WIFE WITH HIS ARMS ABOUT HIS NECK

Kansas City, June 22—"Kiss me good bye and I'll go away and never bother you again." With this request, Albert Snyder, 38 years of age, threw his arms about his wife's neck, and fired a bullet into her forehead. He then fired a ball into his own brain. Recovery of either is doubtful. Recently Mrs. Snyder instituted proceedings for divorce.

MELLEN'S PLACE WON'T BE FILLED FOR SOME DAYS

Theodore N. Vail, head of the New Haven's committee to name Mellen's successor, said today that it was unlikely a choice would be made for several days. Among those mentioned are Edward E. Lonnala, vice-president of the D. L. & W.; Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O.; Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific; Ralph Peters, president of the Long Island; and W. W. Astorbury, first vice-president of the Pennsylvania.

ROBSTOCK WITHDRAWS SEAVIEW AVE. SALOON

Owing to the objection of many property owners, including the U. M. C. Co., the attempt to establish a saloon at 1839 Seaview avenue has been abandoned. Michael Robstock was the applicant. He held a license on East Main street and wanted the county commissioners to grant him a transfer. There was a remonstrance filed upon which a hearing was scheduled for today. Before the proceedings started Robstock gave notice that he had withdrawn.

150,000 Brooklyn Sunday school children paraded the streets the other day. Probably a good many of them also do it during the Sunday school hour.
