

N. Y. PARK CENTER OF LIFE'S WHIRL

Joy Unrestrained When Kiddies Meet on One Level

New York—To see Democracy Unabridged, visit the playgrounds of Central Park.

Children—thousands of them, of every age, race and religion—in virtually unrestrained pursuit of juvenile joy. There are few "verboten" signs, the cops are handpicked for complacency, apparently, and the sky is the limit as long as life and limb are not endangered.

The Park is adjacent to Fifth avenue and a common sight is that of a French governess or tutor standing nearby while Algernon and Gwendolyn Multicash shout with a dozen East siders.

Romance thrives unabashed in the anonymous throngs of the metropolis. Kisses on buses are commonplace. And now the benches on the Brooklyn Bridge have become a favorite trying place for young couples. River traffic is no deterrent. And the moonlight is just as effective there as it is in Central Park.

Columbus Circle is New York's most popular outdoor auditorium. Every evening, regardless of weather, the show takes place. Usually the performer is a lecturer, urging or asking everything from new religions to the most efficient use of toothpicks.

Enthusiastic New York—and there are some—insist the visitor may find the answer here to any whim.

For instance, the motor mania may go to the Motor Parkway in Brooklyn, a wide, long, privately owned stretch of roadway, and, for a nominal entrance fee, send his bus along at the highest speed of which it is capable. There is no speed limit nor any responsibility for what happens to the racer.

Heard at the door of a speakery in the Bright Light district: Prospective patron: Hello, Skipper. John Jones sent me over. Doorman: "But you don't know us."

Prospective patron: "That's all right. I'm willing to trust you."

New York booksellers are "cash-in" on the publicity given to books that have been barred by Boston censors. Over a shelf of books in the window of a Fifth Avenue store is a sign, "Books that cannot be sold in Boston."

Broadway talk is rarely worth face value but friends and family of stage aspirants are prone to believe all they are told of coveted positions won and sometimes salaries paid.

One group of young men went en masse to a show the other night to see pal make his debut before the footlights, and finally located him serving as a super, wearing the robes of a sheik and carrying a huge spear. "Look 'at 'im!" exclaimed one of the group in disgust. "He'd be better off back on the truck."

A man sneezed at the movies and neglected to turn the blast off his vocal cords. The result was an explosive yell which brought a laugh from all parts of the house. The uproar started to die down, but was renewed as the unwinding film happened to throw the following title on the screen: "He must have been a colonel, at least!"

DAWES ISSUES CHALLENGE.—Cinnarron, N. M., July 14 (AP)—Vice-President Dawes today threw a challenge to live bait fishermen when he returned from his first New Mexico fishing trip exhibiting a catch of two fine lake trout taken from Eagle Lake by trolling from a motor boat with a spinner.

The vice-president and his party returned to Philmont ranch just in time to escape a downpour of rain. The entire party including Mrs. Dawes and the two children, will leave at daybreak tomorrow on a camping and fishing trip into the heart of the Cango Del Cristo mountains.

APPEAL DENIED.—New York, July 13 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Mahoney today denied the application of August Heckscher, elderly philanthropist to dismiss a complaint brought against him by Frieda Hempel, opera singer, for breach of an alleged contract to pay her $18,500 a year.

Miss Hempel in her complaint, had charged that after paying one quarterly installment of the money alleged to have been due for agreeing to quit her operatic career and sing exclusively for charity, Mr. Heckscher had refused to continue with his end of the contract.

NO ACTION TAKEN.—Washington, July 14 (AP)—A mass meeting of Washington Jews did not take any action last night on a resolution accepting Henry Ford's apology for the anti-semitic articles published in his weekly magazine, the Dearborn Independent. The resolution will be acted upon at a future meeting.

It Takes But a Short Visit to Garber Brothers' to Find Out More About Furniture Quality and Low Prices Than You Ever Knew Before

A Value Without Equal—Well Built, Luxuriously Comfortable 3-Piece Jacquard Suite

Please do not confuse this suite with suites made special for "sales" purposes. The difference is great. A "sales" suite is made to sell for a certain price. This suite is made to give good service for many years. The reason why this suite is not higher in price, and in many instances it is lower in price, is because it is sold direct to you from our own shops at a big price saving. Comprises a davenport, club chair and wing chair. Hand tied springs on webbing. Moth proofed jacquard.

"Royal Ivory" Dinnerware graces any table. This "Royal Ivory" porcelain is theogue in dinnerware. Its delicately even ivory tone makes a matchless background for the beautiful three-spray floral decoration. In four rich colors with many shades. Handles and edges of each piece are streaked with color. The characteristic fluting which marks and emphasizes the unique beauty of the famous "Barbara-Jane" shapes is conceded to be expressive of the highest art in pottery. The shapes are of exceptionally refined, graceful design. No illustration can possibly do them justice.
