The Hartford Courant seems to be on the winning side this year the majority of times. It chuckled with glee this morning to think that Patrick McGovern was downed in the preliminary caucuses for the naming of men to name candidates for representatives.

The residences of a number of Waterbury people were brightly illuminated last evening in honor of the coming of Judge Bronson, who was born in Waterbury. "We may be considered republicans," said one person, "but we think well of Mr. Bronson, and hope he will be elected."

Friends of Senator Sullivan of Mississippi say the suit for breach of promise of marriage, which has been filed in Washington against him by a Miss Leeton, who is a divorced woman, contains many false allegations, and that the woman really has no claim upon him.

Waterbury's democratic demonstration last evening was one that must have pleased the democratic candidates from Judge Samuel L. Bronson down to the last name on the ticket. It speaks well for the vote that will be cast next Tuesday, and if Samuel L. Bronson is not our next governor and Oliver Gildersleeve our next congressman from the second district it will not be the fault of the Waterbury democrats.

The Democrat's new building came in for lots of compliments last evening. The democratic parade and rally brought crowds of people by our doors and many of them expressed themselves in pleasing terms. The names of the candidates for president, vice-president, governor and senator occupied a prominent place in our show windows, surrounded by the national colors, and the stars and stripes floated from the front of the building.

The government service is in a crippled condition in all the departments and is likely to remain so until after the election, owing to the absence of nearly all of the responsible officials, who are in the field doing political work of some kind, or putting up a bluff that they are, while their salaries are going right along. A man filling a scientific position in the department of agriculture thus voiced his disgust: "This is our busy time, and we need our full force. The service is being neglected by the very men, and by their orders, who prate about giving the people a business-like administration."

The action of Sheriff Rigney and an officer from the County home in taking away the child of Mrs. Dunne yesterday, has aroused a lot of indignation. It seems like a high-handed affair. If the authorities of the County home can rob a mother of her child it is high time that a law giving them that privilege was wiped out. If all reports are to be credited the County home is not the place for children like the Dunne child. A boy or girl who is at all sensitive, or who has ever felt the kindly influence of a good father and mother is made to realize the change after they once enter the County home.

Democrats have entered the last week of the campaign hopeful of success. They have every reason to know that the plain people of the country—those who earn their living by brain or brawn, and who have no interest in or sympathy with the trusts, which are so rapidly crushing out all opportunity for the success of individual effort in any industrial or commercial line—are overwhelmingly in favor of the election of Bryan and Stevenson. They do not underrate the power of the forces which are working in unison for the re-election of Mr. McKinley. On the contrary they know there is danger—grave danger—that the unscrupulous use of bread and butter coercion by those forces will result in defeating the will of the people in a sufficient number of states to re-elect Mr. McKinley. All that man can do to meet this danger is being done by the democratic leaders, from Mr. Bryan down; but after all, it is the voters themselves who will determine the result, and it is difficult to believe that there are a sufficient number of American voters who can be purchased by money or compelled by threats of discharge from their positions to vote against their honest convictions and in favor of retaining this trust-ridden, imperialistic administration in power. This country never saw a more important election day than November 6th will be. The result will show whether a majority of American voters prefer being free men, each a sovereign in his own person, and an equal participant in a free government, or serve under an imperial government, the every act of which is dictated by a money oligarchy.

J. G. Johnson, chairman of the executive body of the democratic national committee, says that Bryan will have 320 votes in the electoral college, McKinley will have ninety-four, and there will be thirty-three doubtful. The committee gives the following reasons for its belief that a tidal wave of democracy is sweeping over the country and that Bryan's election is assured: "In 1896 the German vote went almost entirely for McKinley. This year Mr. Bryan will receive, by the most conservative estimate, 60 per cent of this vote, a gain of 10 per cent in the German vote alone is sufficient to carry several of the so-called doubtful states. Four years ago the labor vote was largely given to McKinley on the alleged 'prosperity' issue. This year the vote of organized labor, numbering hundreds of thousands, will be cast for Bryan. This vote alone is sufficient to carry several 'doubtful' states for Bryan and Stevenson. In 1896 the 'gold democrats' left the regular organization on the financial issue, and they claim to have cast 1,000,000 votes, most of which were given directly to McKinley. This year the 'gold democrats' have returned to the old party, and fully 80 per cent of them will vote for Bryan. In 1896 a large majority of the Irish vote was cast for McKinley. This year the vote will be given to Bryan. The Holland vote, which has always heretofore been republican, will this year go over to Bryan with practical unanimity because of the unfriendly attitude of the administration towards the struggling Boers. The anti-imperialist vote will be cast unanimously for Bryan next month. This is a new and unknown quality in national politics, but the leaders of the movement claim that in one pivotal state alone they have 100,000 voters enrolled and that these are down almost exclusively from the ranks of the republicans. The so-called reform vote will be given almost unanimously for Bryan this year. Heretofore it has been scattered about through numerous small party organizations where it has not made itself felt; but in the aggregate it is a great power. In 1896 the vote and influence of the commercial travelers of the country was given to McKinley, and it has often been alleged that this was the deciding influence of the last national campaign. This year the traveling men are almost unanimously for Bryan. As against this tremendous and overwhelming change in popular sentiment in favor of the democratic national ticket the republicans have nothing to fix their hope on except Hanna's corruption fund. Add this will not suffice. Four years ago every man who could be bought or coerced was handled by the republican managers. They can do no worse this year. But the elements mentioned above, who have joined the democratic ranks since 1896 are not purchasable."

HEARD IN PASSING

Minister Conger has proffered charges of cowardice against Captain Hill, second in command of the United States marines at Pekin. Haul the captain over the coals. Probably now he is sorry that he was not shot by a boxer.—Bridgeport Post.

Morgan G. Bulkeley says he sees no occasion at present for a constitutional convention. Of course he doesn't. A constitution under which he was able to hold on to the governorship for two years after his term had expired and another major candidate for its good enough for him.—Bridgeport Post.

The most remarkable municipal growth shown by the census in any single section of the country is in the three cities of Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma in the state of Washington. These three cities twenty years ago had a population of 4,981 twenty years ago. Now they have 155,233 inhabitants.

The price of gas in Springfield is $1.40 a thousand. The city officials appealed to the state gas commission to order the rate reduced to 75 cents. The commission has rendered their decision to the effect that the company oughtn't to charge over $1.05.—Hartford Post.

The meanest horse thief, the worst highwayman and the most brutal murderer is entitled to a trial by jury but the wage cutter dividing out his wages is denied that right under government by injunction. This is one of the most important issues in the campaign for the wage earners, yet it is ignored.—New Britain Independent.

"Right here I want to say I believe in trusts. They are a good thing. The Standard Oil company put its pipelines to all the small towns where oil is produced, and if it was not for the Standard Oil company this prosperity that we have wouldn't be there today. If that newspaper man puts that down it will make trouble for him."—Senator Scott.

The late William L. Wilson was a successor of General Robert E. Lee as president of Washington and Lee university. He lived in the same house and died in the same room and bed as the hero of the confederacy, and his funeral exercises were held in the chapel of that institution, where the remains of General Lee are buried.—New Haven Union.

PARNELL'S DOUBLE. The curious rumor that Charles Stewart Parnell is not dead, but that he is the mysterious General Dewet, who has given the British so much trouble in South Africa, probably rests upon no other foundation than that of the resemblance the latter bears to the famous Irish leader. It is at least, however, serves to revive interest in a unique and striking figure in Ireland's recent history. Perhaps most people are not aware that the man who, at one time, seemed about to win through parliamentary means such a position for Ireland as should forever set at rest the dispute between it and the United Kingdom was a descendant of the poet. Dr. Thomas Parnell, the friend of Addison and Steele, Congreve and Pope, and author of at least one or two of the pleasantest short poems in the English language, Playfair's "British Family Antiquity" shows that the Parnell family was distinguished as far back at least as the time of Charles II., when Thomas Parnell, a member of a family which had long resided at Cogleton, county of Chester, purchased an estate in Ireland. There was, therefore, a poetical justice in the great fight Charles Stewart Parnell made in behalf of Ireland. His presence and influence were greatly increased in England by the fact that he was a member of the family, whose name figures honorably in English literature and history.

THE WINNER. A late archbishop of Dublin, noted for his originality and love of a joke, was one day walking along a road, when he came across three tramps lying on a bank by the roadside. They were thus addressed by his grace: "I would be willing to give half a crown to the latest of you, if I could tell which of you is most entitled to it."

One of them immediately jumped up and said: "Give it to me. I haven't done any work for six months."

The second came forward and claimed it, saying he had not worked for a year.

While these two were disputing about the honor of being the latest, the third man, who had not even moved, sleepily said: "Come here, gov'nor, and put it in my pocket."—Amusing Journal.
