

HAPPY OVER IN LONDON.

The Election Seemed to Go Their Way.

The London Papers All Comment Favorably upon the Result—Brokers and Bankers Discuss the Subject on the Sidewalks and Curbs—Attempt to Stir Up Jealousy Against England Has Failed, They Say.

London, Nov. 7.—The Times, in a special edition, says: "McKinley's victory is no ordinary party triumph. It is a victory for common honesty, sound sense and sober, enlightened political judgment."

After reference to Bryan's endeavor to make imperialism the paramount issue, the Times says: "The silver and its attendant theories are the real matters upon which the electors have given judgment."

After commenting upon "Bryan's advocacy of unsound principles, unconstitutional methods and his appeals to class hatred, which stirred the passions of all the worst elements of the population," the Times expresses the opinion that had Bryan been elected, even all the checks of the constitution could not have restrained him from experiments fatal to social order and material prosperity, and it concludes: "From that danger the country is mercifully delivered, certainly for the present, and we may hope for all time."

The Star says: "Had Bryan kept to the issues of anti-imperialism, anti-trusts and social reform he might conceivably have won. Sound money proved his undoing. He has been 'crucified on a cross of gold,' but it has been very much of a voluntary crucifixion. The most remarkable feature is the personal defeat of 'Boss' Croker."

London, Nov. 7.—Early this morning an unusual number of brokers gathered on the curb to take advantage of the result of the election in the United States. There was considerable trading in which New York orders are said to have figured largely, slight advances apparently marking a majority of the transactions in American securities.

Among the crowds going to their offices election of the prevailing topic of conversation and the newspapers contain long articles on the same subject. Posters placarded throughout the city prominently displayed the results of the contest as far as known, and a leading feature was the personal defeat of 'Boss' Croker.

Later returns are eagerly awaited, a majority of the morning papers hesitating to announce definitely McKinley's victory.

When the stock market opened there was great excitement in the American market, which decided rises all along the line, shortly followed by a slight relapse.

London, Nov. 7.—The afternoon papers voice the general sentiment of England with the result of the presidential election in the United States. The Evening News says: "Anti-imperialism, the attempt to stir up jealousy against England, the championship of the Boers and pan-Atlanticism, all availed Bryan nothing. His defeat is even more a defeat for Croker and Tammany and that is his happiest feature. It really looks as though Americans are tired of the game of corrupt politics and Americans who have degraded American politics so long."

PROTECTING HIS RIGHTS. The people who are too anxious about their own "rights" are often as mistaken and as amusing as the rooster which "Uncle Silas" watched and tells about in an exchange.

"What I was laughing at?" said Uncle Silas, repeating the boy's question, as they gathered around the chair where he was resting under the shadow of the maples.

"Well, I was just watching what went on in the next yard there, and laughing at a picture of human nature."

"You see, the women folks are cleaning house, and they've moved a lot of things out on the porch, chairs, pictures, and such like, and they put one big looking-glass where it leaned against the porch railing, glass side this way."

"I don't know how their chickens come to be out, for they don't generally have the freedom of the yard, but anyway they was out, and that old red rooster was marching along as lofty as you please, when, just as he got opposite the porch, he stretched up his neck to crow, and saw another red rooster crowing back at him from the looking-glass. That was too much to bear!"

"He seemed to think, at first, that the other fellow was looking at the best of it, and he picked himself up, and looked around rather cautiously. But there was no other rooster in sight, none on the ground nor under the porch, and after jerking his head this way and that, he seemed to think he had really driven off the enemy. So he ruffled his feathers, stretched his neck again, and began to crow over his victory, till all at once he spied the other rooster, and was coming, too."

"Twas funny to watch him, and I can't tell you how many times he tried it. I believe he'd have been at it yet, if some of the folks in the house hadn't seen him and moved the glass for fear he'd break it."

KRUGER'S JOURNEY.

Former President Arrives at Ras Jibuti.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Dispatched from Ras Jibuti give the following information: "The Dutch cruiser Gelderland, with ex-President Kruger on board, which sailed from Laurence Marquis Oct. 20, has arrived here. She has been directed to await instructions from The Hague at Port Said with regard to Mr. Kruger's landing in Europe. The Gelderland will stop there."

Mr. Kruger, who is in excellent health, rejected greatly at the news of the recent Bear successes. Dr. Hyman declared Mr. Kruger was going to Europe purely on a holiday. Mr. Kruger was found sitting on deck with his legs wrapped in sheepskin. "May they fight without remission," he exclaimed energetically, filling his pipe, when informed of the successes of the Boers. "That is what we ask."

Lord Roberts has cabled to the war office that former President Steyn, in a speech to Delarey's burghers Oct. 22, said Mr. Kruger had gone to Europe in order to "get interposed" and that if he failed "the Transvaal will be auctioned off to the highest bidder."

Lord Roberts, in a dispatch dated Johannesburg, Nov. 5, reports to the war office as follows: "Smith-Dorrien states that Major Saunders and Captain Chalmers of the Canadian Mounted Rifles behaved with great gallantry in the action of Nov. 2. Saunders rode out under a heavy fire to bring in a horseless noncommissioned officer, Saunders was wounded and his horse was killed, and Chalmers went to his assistance. Saunders implored him to leave, but was refused, and the gallant Chalmers was, I grieve to say, killed."

Killed in a Brawl. NEWBURG, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Clark Johnston was killed last evening in a drunken brawl in a saloon in this place. A State's young man named Joshua Harrison quarreled, and Harrison killed Johnston with a beer glass. Johnston died in a few minutes. Harrison gave himself up. He is a former sailor and served on a warship during the Santiago fight. Johnston leaves a large family.

Rice Trust Formed. NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 7.—The Rice trust, the American Rice Growers' Distributing company, which has been incorporated, with William K. Vanderbilt of New York president, W. W. Dusen Crowley of Louisiana vice president and general manager. The capital stock is $15,000,000; paid up, $7,500,000; objects stated, to foster markets for rice.

Bullet Kills a Young Girl. NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Owen Squire, a clerk, accidentally killed Lizale Hertzog, 14 years old, in Jamaica, L. I. Squire was holding a Sport rifle in a candy store when the girl came in to buy candy. As she stepped across the threshold the rifle was discharged, and she received a bullet in the temple. Squire was locked up.

Workmen Fall Thirty Feet. STURGIS, Mich., Nov. 7.—Six workmen employed in building a brick factory on Crobbiss & Crosby's furniture factory fell 30 feet yesterday by the collapse of a scaffold. Edward Richards had his leg, hip and arm broken and received probable fatal internal injuries. The others received minor injuries.

Killed in a Coal Mine. WILKESBARRE, Nov. 7.—James John was killed and Patrick Garrabua was severely injured by a fall of rock in the No. 14 tunnel of the Pennsylvania Coal company at Port Blanchard. This is the ninth fatal accident in this district since the strike ended.

Hostess's Attitude. ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 7.—The text of Kuski's reply to the Anglo-German agreement note was given out today. Approval is given the provision for open ports on the rivers of the Chinese littoral, also for the maintenance of the integrity of the Chinese empire.

Cuban Convention Adjourns. HAVANA, Nov. 7.—The constitutional convention adjourned until Monday next, when the committees will report. The question of securing other quarters is under consideration owing to the difficulty of hearing the speakers in so large a hall.

Empress Dowager Frightened. SHANGHAI, Nov. 7.—It is reported that the empress dowager, alarmed at the news that the allies intend to invade the province of Ho-nan, has ordered the southern armies to march promptly to guard the passes on the frontiers.

FOREIGN GOSSIP. More doctors, it is claimed, are kept busy in Australia than in any other country. A Spanish bull fighter's fee for a special performance is about 15,000 pesetas ($4,600).

The coast line of the Chinese empire exceeds 2,000 miles, and the land frontier is 4,400 miles. While repairing a temple the Chinese cover up the eyes of the idols, in order that the deities may not be offended at the sight of the disorder.

Laborers are so scarce in Switzerland that they have to be imported, not only from Italy, but from Bohemia and Silesia. Elephants now cost three times what they did a few years ago in Siam, and the teak lumber industry (to which the big game is a necessary) is seriously crippled.

On a parade ground at Calcutta are several adjacent birds. These creatures walk up and down the grounds, and they look so much like soldiers that at a distance strangers often mistake them for such. The royal Prussian family is the largest owner of forest tracts in Germany. The property consists of not less than 150,000 acres. The southern branch of the Hohenzollerns own a tract of 126,000 acres. The prince of Stolberg-Wernigerode owns forest covering 119,000 acres, which is about the size of the city of Chicago. The timber lands of the prince of Pless comprise 104,000 acres.

The French gullotine was a well-known instrument for taking off men's heads a century ago in France. It was probably made by a German mechanic named Schmidt, under the direction of Dr. Antoine Louis, and was first called a "loulouette." But Dr. Guillotine had advocated some such mode of execution several years before, and the instrument finally was called from him. Counterfeiters' Peculiarities. Most counterfeit documents are detected through some individual peculiarity of the counterfeiter of which he himself is not aware.

BRONSON DEFEATED.

McLean Carries Connecticut—Four Republican Congressmen.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 7.—The revised election returns for Connecticut, with every town and district in the state heard from gives the state to McKimley by a plurality of 28,415. The republican state ticket headed by George P. McLean for governor is elected by a plurality of 14,340. All four republican congressmen are re-elected with the following pluralities: First district, 8,221; second district, 3,815; third district, 5,525; fourth district, 8,813. The state senate will contain twenty-two republicans and twenty-one democrats as against twenty-one republicans and three democrats two years ago. The house of representatives is republican by 202 to 52, a republican gain over the last house of twenty-one.

The vote in Connecticut was: For president: McKimley, 102,349; Bryan 73,934. For Governor: McLean, r, 96,127; Bronson, d, 81,737. For Congressmen: First district, Henry r, 25,047; Tuttle, d, 16,826. Second district, Sperry, r, 33,224; Gilderleeve, d, 28,400. Third district, Russell, r, 14,760; Potter, d, 9,235. Fourth district, Hill, r, 29,454; Lyman, d, 29,041.

The republican plurality for president was out down nearly 50 per cent as compared with that of 1896, when McKimley's margin was 53,504. The state ticket figures were still further reduced, the republican plurality being 14,340 as against 62,283 in 1896. Complete returns received from every town in the state show that a general assembly overwhelmingly republican has been elected. In the state senate there will sit twenty-two republicans and two democrats, a gain of one republican over the senate of two years ago, when there were twenty-one republicans and three democrats. The republican gain was in the fourteenth district where William E. Seely, r, defeated his democratic opponent. In the fifth district, William Kennedy of Naugatuck, defeated Harold R. Durant of Waterbury, r, James P. Bree, d, defeated Frederick L. Averill in New Haven, eighth district.

The lower branch of the general assembly is as republican in complexion as the senate. The republicans elected 202 representatives; the democrats fifty-two. The town of Avon in New Haven county, took advantage of the new caucus and elected two representatives, instead of one, as formerly. The republicans and the democrats in this town divided the honor, sending one each to Hartford. In Goodfield county, also elected on the basis of the new caucus and sent two. The republicans gained twenty-one representatives in the house.

PHILIP MARTINY. A great feature of the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., will be the sculptural adornments of the principal buildings and the many groups of beautiful figures upon the fountains and colonades. In the courts and plazas and in other parts of the exposition grounds already several carrels of this sculpture have been completed and sent to Buffalo, to be placed in position upon and about the buildings of this magnificent creation of the brains of architects, sculptors, artists and other men of genius. The sculptors engaged in the production of these artistic features of the exposition are all men and women of national repute. Among them is Philip Martiny, who is modeling many of the figures which are to be reproduced in staff for the decoration of the great electric tower and other prominent features of the exposition grounds.

Mr. Martiny has had an interesting career. He is by birth an Alsatian, but has spent the greater part of his boyhood in France. At the age of 15 he commenced seriously to study his profession, becoming an apprentice in the studio of a sculptor named Dock, also an Alsatian resident of France. From assistant he became a sculptor, and when Mr. Martiny came to America in the early '80s, his work in modeling and wood carving immediately attracted attention and obtained for him numerous commissions, among which was one for a large part of the decorative work in the Vanderbilt homes. In 1885, when Frederic MacMonnies for Augustus St. Gaudens's studio to establish his own, Martiny succeeded him as St. Gaudens's assistant. From assistant he became a laborer, the medal commemorating the celebration in New York of the hundredth anniversary of Washington's inauguration as first president of the United States being the product of their joint efforts.

Gratifying as this was at the time, during the last ten years Mr. Martiny has won fame through his individual work, and now ranks among the first American sculptors. At the world's fair in Chicago the work which Martiny which surrounded the art palace was the work of Mr. Martiny, as were also the figures of "Painting," "Music," "Sculpture" and "Architecture," which marked the division of the north end of the same building. Examples of Martiny's work which remain permanently at Chicago are the figures for spandrels for arches of the art institute. Perhaps the work through which he is best known to all Americans is the grand statue in the congressional library at Washington.

An interesting bit of history connected with Martiny's famous statue of "Victory," which is a memorial to a New Jersey regiment, and stands in front of the City hall in Jersey City, runs as follows: A political clique of self-constituted critics objected to the figure of a woman, although that figure was the embodiment of victory, commemorating military valor—their idea being that the only design suitable for such a statue was the conventional soldier at parade rest, set upon a shaft. The politicians even tried to enforce their ideas by causing an injunction to be issued restraining the committee from accepting Mr. Martiny's design, and the affair was carried into the courts. It is a satisfaction to say that in this case politics was not permitted to rule art; the judge upholding the decision in Mr. Martiny's favor, declaring his design the most artistic and appropriate offered.

HE GUESSED WRONG. "Now, Johnny, if six men can do a piece of work in one day, how long will it take one man to do it?" asked a New York school teacher of a sharp little boy.

"The school teacher is a blamed fool if he thinks I can answer that question," whispered Johnny in a low voice to the next boy.

"Speak out, Johnny; I dare say you are right," replied the pedagogue. Texas Siftings.

A WARM SUBJECT There's nothing in the world we're so much interested in as coal. We've studied it for years. It may sound queer to speak of coal buying and selling as a science, but that's what we've made it. Two important discoveries we have made are that complete satisfaction to our customers pay best, and that the way to win business is to deserve it.
